KING PLANS RETURN TO SPAIN

Today

Intelligent Fire.
Bones or Medals.
Ford's 20,000,000th Car.
Russia Puzzles Finance.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

"FIRE RAZES the old Bluecher palace in Berlin, just bought for $1,800,000, for a United States embassy."

An intelligent fire. It might have done worse. It reminds the United States that their government, in depression and unemployment, spends $1,800,000 to supply a palace to an American ambassador who gets his job, usually, as a reward for contributions to a campaign fund.

A man rich enough to help finance a President is rich enough to rent his own palace, if he needs one.

This is a business country. Its ambassadors should have a business office, and board and lodge themselves as other Americans do.

TO SUGGEST that squandering money in that fashion impresses foreigners is foolish. The Germans know we have the money, why prove to them that we lack common sense?

A nation that shudders at the thought of handing a dole to a half-starved family should shudder also at the thought of buying a palace for a series of political ambassadorial favorites. That nonsense ought to stop.

NEXT SUNDAY "kindness-to animal week" begins. Mrs. Belis, head of the New York Anti-Vivisection Society, will give medals for heroism to six dogs.

The dogs would prefer six good bones, but that does not spoil the kind-hearted idea. Men keep dogs and give them medals. If dogs kept men they would give bones to heroic men.

In the long run, after a hundred or a thousand years, it won't make much difference whether you got a medal or a bone. Nobody will know anything about it.

The greatest kindness to animals would be their gradual elimination, as their usefulness ends. Why breed faithful dogs to lick your feet?

NOT LONG ago Henry Ford had nothing. But he was thinking and working. Last Tuesday he drove from his factory to his own residence in his Ford car number TWENTY MILLION. He made the first in 1893 and the twenty millionth will stand in the Ford museum beside the first.

Ford has made automobiles enough to carry 100,000,000 human beings, in fact our entire population of 123,000,000, without packing them too tightly, the babies sitting on their parents' knees. It pays to THINK AND WORK. Neither by itself will carry you far.

RUSSIA HAS no death penalty for murder, but many death penalties for dishonesty and treachery. A week ago six were sentenced to death in connection with grain transactions, now 10 more must die for the same offense, and 58 go to prison as "inveterate class enemies."

AT THE SAME time Russia invites skilled workers from other countries to come and earn good wages.

Workers will wonder that there isn't, in Russia, anybody out of a job. American hotelkeepers will learn from Ray Long, editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine, that it is almost impossible to rent a hotel room in Russia. He was delighted to get a small room by special favor with no carpet on the floor, paying 18 American dollars a day.

Some of our best financial minds, that once had only contempt for Russia, may soon be going over to find out how they do it.

THE SPANISH King went to Marseilles, on a battleship. The Queen went to Paris, perhaps for shopping. It reminds you of the old rhyme about the king "counting out his money," and the queen, "in the parlor, eating bread and honey."

The Queen may be in the Rue De La Paix today, looking at spring styles. The King may be counting up his money. Doubtless, he has put aside enough to take care of his family.

YESTERDAY BROUGHT disagreeable news of rioting and bloodshed in Spain. Republican authorities are like dictators, more severe than kings and will know how to stop that, probably.

Associated Press reports that the republic will "increase liberty," enforce "respect for all religious creeds," and "modify the aggrarian policy to benefit the farmer." Recent American history will inform them that it is not so easy for a republic to benefit farmers.

The colors of the new republic are draped on the doors of the royal palace in Madrid. A new chapter begins.

It may not last forever. Spain had an earlier republic, in 1873. It had four presidents. One lasted four months, one six weeks, one seven weeks, one a few days; then came a dictatorship. And then the Bourbons, Alfonso's family, came back.

THE AUTOMOBILE industry is interested in news that the New Haven Railroad, during the last year, saved $90,000, using trucks instead of freight cars.

In time railroads will use trucks to pick up freight at the factory, carry it to the tracks, then run on rails using steel wheels, at high speed, with no stops, instead of burning up rubber and brakes, then take to the road again and deliver at destination.

No automobile truck line could

CHARGE CITY INSPECTOR TOOK CASH

Contractor Denies Paying Jobholders; Lie Passed By Witness and Accused

The charge that a city inspector had accepted money from a contractor was made today at City Council's investigation of Attorney Henry Oliver Evans' charges against the Public Works Department.

The inspector, Walter Shafer, was accused by Melvin Hartz, a witness called by Attorney Evans during the questioning of a number of city inspectors. Hartz declared that he had seen Joseph Kissane, Jr., of the O'Herron Contracting Company, city contractor, give Shafer money.

Hartz, former truck driver of the O'Herron company, was being questioned by Attorney Evans relative to a conversation he had with Kissane a few weeks ago.

CHARGE DENIED

Shafer who was standing alongside of Hartz during questioning declared:

"You are a liar. I've stood here long enough."

Hartz made no reply.

Kissane was called to the stand by Attorney Lee Beatty and flatly denied Hartz's charges. He said:

"There was never a time that I gave Walter Shafer or any other city inspector any money

P. S. C. ADVISED RATE 'LIFT'

HARRISBURG, April 16.—Testimony was introduced today before the House committee investigating public utilities that the late Commissioner M. J. Woes of Spanish Kings Date Back To Kind Isabella

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS 'BAER—

Another king's tailor has lost his job.

Don Estaban Viva y Spanola, who furnished two pairs of pants with every coat and three vests for each meal, is out of work.

King Alfonso took it on the lamm. But he quit like a man. All this trouble started when Isabella gave her jewels to Columbus.

Ferdinand blew up into a royal purple when he heard that sailor was hanging around the palace again.

Christopher squared matters by performing the egg-in-the-hat illusion. But it was the finish of Spanish monarchy. We must admire the way Alfonso took the gate.

He waved his hand and said:

"See you around some time."

Then he slammed his desk, whistled for the Queen and walked out.

It was the people's vote that established the republic. That's fine for the people. But wait until they try to vote again.

Then they will discover the government of the people, for the people and by the people can do pretty well without the people.

'Missing' Estate Articles Tally With Items Seized From Niece, Court Told

These developments today marked the hearing of Dorothy Russell Calvit's suit to upset the will of her stepfather, Alexander P. Moore, former ambassador to Spain:

1—Judge Thomas P. Trimble declared that the hearing has produced evidence of fraud.

2—Furniture which was seized for the back rent of Moore's niece, Mrs. Mildred Martin, was identified as similar to articles which Mrs. Calvit contends are missing from the estate of her mother, Lillian Russell.

3—The sale of a pearl necklace, which had been appraised at $10,000, from Miss Russell's estate, to Moore for $1,000 was scored by Judge Trimble.

In overruling an objection to a question put to Mrs. Mildred Martin, Moore's niece, who, it was testified, failed to pay her rent in the Coronado apartments, Judge Trimble asserted:

"There is much evidence of fraud having been perpetrated. The door has been opened wide and will be opened as wide as counsel wants to."

H. W. Higbee, superintendent of the Coronda, testified as to the articles seized from Mrs. Martin's apartment a few months ago—tapestries, five rugs, candlesticks, chairs, portiers, a ruby glass bowl, a mirror bearing the initials L. R. M. It was not established that these were never the property of Miss Russell, but Attorney Herman Pollack, counsel for Mrs. Calvit, contended that they fitted the description of certain of the 121 articles which Mrs. Calvit has charged are missing from the estate of her mother.

SOME ARTICLES SOLD

Higbee added that some of these articles had been sold, that others are still in the possession of the apartment owners.

Mrs. Martin, subject to a stiff cross-examination on the stand by Pollack, testified that this fur-

BLUE LAW PLEA ANSWERED

Representative M. A. Musmanno today pointed out that all judges were not as liberal as Superior Court Judge W. H. Keller, who last night expressed the opinion that the Blue Laws of 1794 did not prohibit Sunday golf and other sports.

Musmanno, sponsor of anti-Blue Law legislation, pointed to decisions that have made those who indulged in innocent Sunday sports and other activities criminals in the eyes of the law.

Judge Keller told an audience of Reformed Churches of the Pittsburgh district last night:

"This old act is not one-half so blue, not one-half so rigorous and not one-half so forbidding as many think. There is nothing in the act to prohibit Sunday golf or a quiet game of baseball, played by your boys, if they do not interfere with divine worship or the peace and good order of the neighborhood."

Today, Representative Musmanno, in an interview, said:

"Not all the judges have interpreted the law with the same tolerance advocated by Judge

Princess at Hoover Dinner Asks When Dry Law Ends

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(AP.)—Seated between President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson at a White House dinner last night, Princess Takamatsu, honeymooning here, with her husband, brother of Japan's Emperor, asked how long prohibition would last.

Stimson told her that was a question she had better refer to President Hoover, but she laughingly dropped the subject.

The princess admired the Japanese cherry blossoms in the room and found she had something in common with them, in addition to the fact that both she and they came from Japan.

She inquired in her excellent English:

"How long have the Japanese cherry trees circled the tidal basin?"

Secretary Stimson replied that they were planted there 19 years ago. The princess laughed:

"Just as old as I am, 19 years."

H. S. Higgins, first vice president of the Parmelee Transportation Company, in New York, also refused to commit himself.

Provisional President Niceto Alcala Zamora and his cabinet tackle anew in Madrid the task of transforming the nation into a stable republic.

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA

International News Service.

MADRID, April 16.—The republic of Spain, struggling to its feet under the guidance of Provisional President Alcala Zamora, today remained technically a monarchy on revelation that Alfonso XIII, forced by popular demand to leave the country, refused to abdicate.

Without renouncing royal rights or signing the documents that would have wiped out the 1,000-year-old Bourbon dynasty, the adamant king yielded to the advice of political leaders and stepped from the throne to avert civil war.

INTENDS TO RETURN

But even as joy-mad Spaniards received with deafening cheers a manifesto of the Republican government pledging itself to the establishment of a constitutional government with a full bill of rights, Alfonso served notice on political leaders that he remained King of Spain and intended to return.

The sharp statement of the departed monarch was kept from public eyes here, but Monarchist

Alfonso's Aged Aunt, Ill, Left Behind in Flight

MADRID, April 16.—(AP.)—When King Alfonso and his family fled from Spain yesterday, the Infanta Isabelle, 80-year-old princess of the blood, who once before saw a Spanish throne fall, was left in her private palace to learn of the latest royal debacle through her servants.

The Infanta, aunt of King Alfonso, learned of the royal family's hasty departure only last night.

When she was told, she resolutely set about preparing for her own departure. The last time she left Spain was when her mother, Queen Isabelle, was dethroned in the 70's.

Alfonso, it was said, refused to bid her farewell because she was ill and because of the suffering the news would bring her.

HOOVER REVERSES POLICY, CURBS MARINES IN NICARAGUA

REPUDIATES COOLIDGE PROGRAM

Stimson Delegates Duty of Protecting Americans' Lives to Native Guards

International News Service

WASHINGTON, April 16. —Repudiation of the Central American policy of the Coolidge and previous administrations was seen today in the policy just disclosed by the Hoover administration in the use of American forces in the present Nicaraguan crisis at Puerto Cabezas, where eight Americans were killed April 11 and 12 by bandits, according to official advices to the State Department today.

Despite the call on the state department and the navy for protection of American property in eastern Nicaragua, which came from the Standard Fruit and Steamship company, Secretary of State Stimson has delegated the job to native Nicaraguan National Guardsmen. American forces will not be used, the state department announced.

It is true the natives are commanded by American Marine officers but they are an integral part of the Nicaraguan Guard for the present.

WILL ANSWER CALLS

The American government, under the policy just disclosed, will protect the lives of Americans and foreigners in unsettled Central America as far as possible. American warships will continue to answer any call for assistance and will afford asylum, Stimson made clear. He declined to make a formal announcement of his policy, which is accepted as a reversal of the Kellogg policy under Secretary of State Frank G. Kellogg and of Charles E. Hughes under Harding.

The Hoover administration, it was declared, does not propose to become involved again in a general campaign to protect property in Nicaragua. The administration considers that Americans doing business there have been prone to demand protection of their government and more vociferous in their demands than have Americans in any of the other Central American countries.

The Hoover administration has taken the view, it was said, that the former policy in Nicaragua, under which the Marines went into that country, has led to such abuses and dangers that it will no longer be continued.

PITTSBURGHER PERILED

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 16.—(AP.)—Nicaraguan insurgents, after attacking and capturing Cabo Gracias a Dios, in the extreme eastern corner of their country, were believed today to have fled from the village, looting it of a large quantity of stores.

No information concerning William Green, believed a former North Side resident, could be found here.

"You can't call me a 'queen' any more, but I will say I'm a lot happier than some queens I know of."

The couple was married yesterday. They are remaining in Paris for the present.

Charge Inspector Took Money

in 1927 or in any other year on any street."

Attorney Beatty asked:

"Then you flatly deny everything that Hartz said about the money?"

Kissane:

"Yes."

Hartz was being questioned by Attorney Evans when he made the charge. Evans asked him:

"Do you recall any special conversation with Shafer?"

Hartz replied:

"I remember one day Shafer came up to me and asked me if I had seen Joe. I told him that I had not, and then Shafer told me 'Well I'd like to see Joe, because I need some money.' A short time later I saw Kissane give Shafer some money—it was a bill."

LIQUOR HINTED

Hartz testified that he had seen Shafer on the job under the influence of liquor several times. In reply to questioning by Attorney Beatty, Hartz said the money had been passed in Wylie avenue. Launching into a statement, Hartz continued that Shafer once asked him if he was going to quit the O'Herron Company. He said that he intended to do so, to which Shafer was quoted as having replied:

"Well, let me know soon, because I want to get some one a job."

Relating his conversation with Joseph Kissane, Sr., Hartz said that he told the president of the contracting firm that he had been visited by two investigators of the League of Women Voters who inquired regarding city contracts. Hartz said:

"Joe, I don't want to get mixed up in this, and then Joe said to me, 'Hartz you don't have to say anything except to tell them that you worked in the garage.' "

STANDS BY STORY

The witness was cross-examined by Attorney Edward G. Coll, representing the inspectors at the probe. Hartz refused to be shaken in his charge of having seen money passed and added that he had never told anyone of the incident until he informed Attorney Evans today. He was also questioned by Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin.

DEFENSE DELAYED

As the hearing started Attorney Evans tried to induce the Public Works Department to present at least a part of the defense it has prepared to increased quantities on city street and sewer work. Attorney Beatty advised that a summary is being prepared as the basis for the department's reply, and is not ready.

Director Edward G. Lang, Harry Aaronson, real estate man, and several city inspectors, including Philip Spann, father of Representative Max Spann, and P. T. Bird, of the O'Herron Contracting Company, were called as witnesses when Evans resumed the presentation of his evidence.

Lang admitted the accuracy of newspaper reports that 18 out of 28 appointments for inspector jobs were provisional. The reports, he said, were taken from official records in his office. Attorney Evans then said:

"Well in that case the examination for inspector jobs are not competitive."

Lang explained that provisional appointments are made when there is no waiting list of inspectors who have passed the civil service examination. He said that provisional appointees must take the examination within three months of their appointment.

RAZING DISCUSSED

Aaronson was questioned relative to a conversation he had with Tom M. Reed, chief engineer of the bureau of engineering regarding the partial razing of buildings in Grant street. He said Reed told him that he might get the contractor to tear down the balance of the building for the salvage. Aaronson testified, however, that he had paid Joseph J. Darney $200 for the work.

Evans pressed his inquiry into gifts of stoves and bathroom fixtures to city inspectors and questioned David Darney, son of Joseph J. Darney, and Joseph Schultz, who said that Inspectors John B. Milby and Anthony Niedbalski were present when the bathroom fixtures were loaded on trucks of A. F. Jordano, city contractor, for delivery to the home of Niedbalski. It was charged yesterday that Darney had sold Niedbalski the fixtures, at a price concession.

From one of the inspectors, W. C. Fitzsimmons, Attorney Evans obtained the admission that he is not entirely dependent upon his $141 monthly salary for a livelihood. Fitzsimmons said he received an income from a $40,000 legacy left him by his sister.

A shipment of samples of canned goods, similar to those delivered to the City Home at Mayview last year, was received by Attorney Colvin today from the L. H. Parke Company of Philadelphia, together with other samples from wholesalers. The samples are to be compared with foodstuffs obtained at the City Home a few days ago. No date has been set for the comparison.

It was also learned that auditors from Main & Co., engaged in the dual audit of records of the Department of Supplies, had finished checking the Mayview records for 1929.

19th Ward Women Pledge Confidence in Mayor

A resolution expressing "our unfailing confidence" in Mayor Charles H. Kline was adopted at a meeting last night of the Nineteenth Ward Women's Republican Organization in the Service Men's Club, 218 Boggs avenue. Mrs. Winifred I. Foley, vice chairman of the ward organization, presided.

The confidence was expressed in reply to "criticism of a vague, uncertain, mysterious and unreliable character" directed at the Mayor's administration. The resolution declared the Mayor's illness deprived the city of the services of "the most distinguished, capable, loyal and great-hearted executive it has had." A second resolution regretted the death of Nicholas Longworth, late speaker of the national House of Representatives.

Speakers included Judge Sara Soffel, Miss Ann O'Hara, assistant deputy attorney general of Pennsylvania, and Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh.

CITY MANAGER FIGHT LOOMS IN SENATE

Sponsor for Pittsburgh Bill Sought; Backers See Success Through Changes

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, April 16. —A new city manager bill for Pittsburgh, which would provide for an elective controller and civil service provisions, was being set up today in the hope a senator could be found to present it.

Several members of the Upper House, approached yesterday, refused to promise sponsorship, but those who hope to see an optional measure similar to the new extinct Moore bill, but minus the clauses which drew most fire, believe they can persuade a senatorial group to get behind the measure.

When and if the bill will emerge is dependent on the feeling in the Senate. The likelihood of another manager bill reaching the House hopper is remote after the bitter struggle and 103 to 91 defeat of the Moore bill.

AMENDMENT PROPOSED

Veteran legislators also point out that an amendment to the city charter could be provided and accomplish, if passed, an effect in the city government similar to city managership.

The passage of such an amendment or of a municipal manager bill was thought possible by several of veteran legislators who recalled the ripper bill of 1899. In that year the Legislature removed the mayor of Pittsburgh. It replaced the office with that of recorder.

After several years the mayor form was returned, but the effect of the ripper was to oust machine politics for nearly 10 years.

WRECKED ORGANIZATION

The ripper virtually destroyed the Flinn-Magee organization which had ruled the community.

A. M. Brown, it was recalled, became city recorder, and following him as mayor were William Hays, George Guthrie and then William Magee.

Hope was expressed by some legislators that if a bill is submitted concerning city managership, it would include all cities in the state. At present the boroughs can have this form of government if they desire, but there is no act enabling any of the various classes of cities to get it.

Many friends of the manager plan feel, however, that Pittsburgh alone should become the target for the experiment, forming at least an opening wedge.

MOORE JUDGE SEES FRAUD

niture had been given her by Moore.

It was during this cross-examination that Pollack revealed that a collection of antiques owned by Miss Russell was missing.

As to the purchase of the necklace for $1,000, Judge Trimble said:

"Any man who would do this is not entitled to any mercy from this court, dead or alive."

Robert J. Dodds, of the law firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay, announced that it was a stenographic error which caused the necklace to be appraised at $1,000 rather than $10,000.

Attorney Pollack, who brought out yesterday that four days before he bought the necklace for $1,000 at the sale of Miss Russell's effects, a Moore had had it appraised in New York for $8,500, said:

"We are not attempting any reflection on the trust company in this matter. This necklace was taken surreptiously by Mr. Moore."

In cross-examining Mrs. Martin, Pollack asked her whether she had ever worn an ermine wrap which he contends was not listed among Miss Russell's effects.

NEVER HAD WRAP

Mrs. Martin said she had never had the wrap, but told of receiving a sable scarf and a silver fox neckpiece once owned by Miss Russell. Mrs. Martin said these articles had been given her by a friend, Edward Roos, who had purchased them at the Russell sale.

Another witness was Jessie Sutherland, once secretary to Moore. She said that after Herbert Hoover had been elected president and had announced he was going to South America, Moore instructed her to take certain articles from Mrs. Martin's apartment and ship them to Peru, to which country he had been named ambassador. She said she sent two rugs, some tapestry, the oil painting which Howard Chandler Christy made of Miss Russell, and other things.

EX-MAID TESTIFIED

This afternoon Mrs. Lena Chapman, once a maid for Miss Russell, testified that she had in her sister's home in Princeton place a suite of bedroom furniture and three trunks which Pollack contended belonged to Mrs. Calvit. Mrs. Chapman explained that Moore had sent the furniture there and had told her to "get rid of" the trunks because Mrs. Calvit, Moore said, hadn't seen fit to send for them.

An air of mystery attached itself to four or five letters, which Mrs. Chapman said she had found in the Moore home in Penn avenue after the family had moved. Mrs. Chapman said these letters were from Miss Russell to Mrs. Calvit and that they were in the possession of her husband, K. C. Chapman, who was in the courtroom.

PANTAGES HELD IN GIRL CASE

SAN DIEGO, April 16.—(INS.) —Trial on charges of violating the Juvenile Court laws today faces Alexander Pantages, theatrical magnate, and his four co-defendants.

They were bound over yesterday by Justice of the Peace A. H. Mundo, following a hearing growing out of Hollywood's sensational "girl bazar."

Justice Mundo said from the bench that while the case against Pantages, Jesse Shreve, John P. Mills, Olive Day and William Jobelmann, was not "the strongest" he had ever heard, he did feel that a case existed.

Pantages faces charges of conspiracy to violate the Juvenile Court, a felony, a violation of the Juvenile Court law, a high grade misdemeanor.

LOUIS J. BROWN, president of the Kellogg Company, says:

"Necessity will force industry in general to a six-hour working day, and a higher wage scale."

His firm has adopted the plan. The "higher scale," presumably, means a higher rate per hour, not per six-hour day.

As machinery makes fewer men necessary, the work day and week must be shorter.

The human race must be fed, will see to it that it is fed, and in this age you can't adopt the ancient plan of killing off girl babies, thus diminishing the labor supply.

CITY POSTS FILLED WITH NO EXAMS

Civil Service Board Has Passed Only on Laborers This Year, Official Admits

No civil service examinations for appointments to city jobs, except for laborers, have been held since January 30, Thomas F. Hansberry, secretary of the Civil Service Commission, admitted today.

He also admitted that of the 125 departments, bureaus and divisions in which 6,000 men and women are employed, only 27 merit lists of persons qualified to filll positions are available, when there should be 125.

Asked if the failure of the commission to provide merit lists was not a violation of the spirit of the civil service law and regulations, he answered in the negative.

FEW LISTS MADE UP

Such practice has enabled the Mayor and department heads to make provisional appointments, it was said. Such appointees qualify later by taking a noncompetitive examination. The records of his office also show that only 25 lists from 125 departments were made up last year and for 1931 to date only seven lists have been made up. When Hansberry was asked why lists in nearly 100 departments, bureaus and divisions were not available, he said:

"We have been handicapped because of so many laborers taking physical examinations. Upwards of 1,600 have been here this year."

Hansberry said that labor examinations are held four days a week, between 10:30 a. m. and 12:30 p. m., and that his office has not had time to call for other examinations, because they did not have the room.

AIR ROOM HALF DAY

Asked what happens after 12:30 p. m. each day, Hansberry replied:

"We air the room. We had 60 men in here yesterday taking a physical examination. These men strip to the waist."

When questioned further how it came that only 25 lists were made up last year, he said there might have been lists available, as examinations of persons who qualify for jobs are good for one year, when a re-examinations must be held. He admitted that the only lists now available would be found on the bulletin board in the corridor of his office, where there are 27.

Hansberry's records showed that 18 lists in as many departments, bureaus or divisions had been prepared during the first six months of 1930 and seven for the remainder of the year. He explained that during the final six months of the year, part of their office space was taken away from them and that in the fall physical examination of laborers pressed on them heavily for time.

CLAIMS LACK OF ROOM

Hansberry also admitted that the commission's examiners did not have any part in the physical examination of laborers. He said regular examinations could not be held by the examiners, because there was no room, although admitting there were many other rooms in the City-County Building.

It also developed that examinations for inspectors in the Department of Public Works have been asked for May 4, 6 and 7. The available list from which inspectors could be named expired September 4 of last year.

The only examinations, outside of laborers, held so far this year for positions in the public service include Bureau of Fire, Bureau of Tests, Bureau of Smoke, Bureau of Engineering, Bureau of Water and Bureau of Building Inspection. Examination of candidates for positions in these divisions were held last January.

Examinations for various positions in the city service start today and continue for 12 days.

Coolidge Sees Necessity For Fact-Finding Bodies

BOSTON, Mass., April 16.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

The use of fact-finding commissions is again being criticized. About 25 years ago agitation caused the Congress to prohibit spending public money for such purpose. Recently the subject has returned.

Mr. Coolidge

Some people are born with a complete set of ready-made opinions. Facts do not affect them. But no executive from first selectman to President can know everything necessary to discharge his office or be able to learn it from official sources. He must call on some body which can gather the information. Public duty requires it.

But a good system can be abused. If it appears that a commission is established to relieve the executive from making his own decision, or to displace the ordinary functions and powers of the legislative branch of government, criticism will be made. Legislators suspect commissions of usurping the law-making power. It is well therefore to put some legislators on the commission. They can defend a report on the floor if legislation is sought. When these difficulties are avoided, when a candid and sincere search for truth appears, very helpful commissions can usually be appointed without the legislators feeling slighted and without creating just cause for criticism.

GUNMEN SLAY CAPONE ALLY

NEW YORK, April 16.—(INS.)—A violent gang war was predicted in New York today as the aftermath of the killing of Guiseppe Masseria, known as "Joe the Boss." He was said by police to be an ally of Al Capone and worked with the Chicago gang leader in the liquor business, racketeering and gambling.

Masseria was shot to death in a Coney Island cafe by two well-dressed young men who calmly walked into the restaurant and began shooting.

The killers walked leisurely out of the cafe and escaped in an automobile.

An armored steel car, equipped with bulletproof glass an inch thick, in which "Joe the Boss" was said to have traveled to protect him from many enemies, was found near the scene of the shooting. Police said they believed three of the Masseria gang, who had been with their chief in the cafe, might have hired the two young men to kill Masseria.

"Joe the Boss" was free under $45,000 bail as a material witness in the killing of two men slain in a feud over a police racket, authorities revealed.

REPEAL VETO QUIZ PLANNED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 16.—(AP.)—Abandoning efforts to override the veto of Gov. L. L. Emmerson on the state prohibition repeal bill, 100 self-styled "Liberals" of the lower house of the General Assembly today confined themselves to plans for investigating the veto.

Representative Harry McCaskrin (Rep.), of Rock Island, was empowered to prepare a resolution calling for the appointment of a House committee of five to carry on the inquiry—especially into a charge made in the Senate by Senator Monroe (Dem.), of Collinville, who said the Governor was spending $4,000 to send out 168,000 copies of his veto message to citizens.

Gov. Emmerson declared there was no mystery about his spending money to mail copies of his message to the taxpayers of the state, and that he would continue to do so despite the "Liberals." He said the taxpayers have a right to know what their Governor says.

SHORT TERM OFFENDERS FAVORED

Outdoor Work Assured at Aspinwall After Repairs Made at Old Poorhouse

About 100 "guests" of Allegheny County moved today from the overcrowded jail in Ross street to the new county farm at Parkview, where sunshine and fresh air make the sentence a pleasure, according to first arrivals.

The men transferred to the farm are for the most part short-term prisoners and first offenders who have earned for themselves a place of trust with warden and guards. They look upon life on the farm as a big improvement over that behind bars in the drab and crowded county jail.

On the farm they will work outdoors, live in dormitories, well lighted and airy. They will be employed on farm and garden work eventually, but for the present they must assist in renovating the old building in which they are housed. It is part of the old poor farm, long abandoned and occupied once since as a government hospital.

Walter Teats has been named superintendent of the institution, which comes directly under the supervision of Warden McNeil.

BLAZE FOUGHT UNDER STREET

Firemen were called out in the downtown district this morning to extinguish a fire in a transformer in a manhole under Fifth avenue, near Market street. Patrolman Charles Neubauer, of Central Police Station, discovered smoke pouring from the manhole, and he called firemen.

Firemen in turn notified the Duquesne Light Company, and C. U. Thomas, of the repair division, was sent to the scene. Thomas donned a gas mask and descended into the manhole and extinguished the blaze. The damage was not estimated.

Relatively high pressure now covers the entire United States, with crests of high pressure over the New England states and over the Rocky Mountains and central plains. The low pressure units were pushed off the map, so to speak, there being no centers of disturbance within the United States. There is a belt of thundershowers extending from the Great Lakes southwestward to the panhandle of Texas, and showers continued over Florida. Over much the greater portion of the country the skies are clear. Temperature changes were slight. Temperatures over this section and over most of the country are near the normal. NEW YORK, April 16.—(P.)—Miss Henrietta Swope, who is the daughter of Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company, and has a reputation of her own as an astronomer, lectured last night at the American Museum of Natural History on "Variable Stars in the Milky Way."

Miss Swope started working four years ago, a year after her graduation from Barnard College, in the Harvard Observatory, under Dr. Harlow Shapley, its director.

So far, she has to her credit the discovery of more than 400 variable stars—"yardsticks," used by astronomers in measuring the universe.

A message from the liner said the King was ill. The nature of his illness was not disclosed, but it was not believed to be serious. Plans for entertainment here were canceled.

DIVORCE SUIT STUNS COBB

MONTEREY, Cal., April 16.—(INS.)—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, erstwhile "Georgia Peach" of baseball, today was reported en route to his home in Augusta, Ga., where his wife has filed suit for divorce.

Upon leaving here yesterday, the man who has broken more records in baseball than any other, expressed surprise at his wife's action. He said:

"I am surprised and shocked to be placed in my present position. A statement from me at this time comes very hard. I have always loved my wife, my children and my home. I am sorry that such apparent hasty action as this was taken in my absence from home and before consulting me in the matter.

"My present trip to California was to open the San Francisco baseball club ground and to look for a home with a view to living here."

In his wife's divorce suit, filed yesterday, the charge is mental cruelty. Mrs. Cobb asked temporary alimony and the custody of their four minor children, Shirley, 19; Herschel, 14; Beverly, 11, and Howell, 9. Ty Cobb, Jr., over 21, is a Princton senior.

DUCHESS FETED BY MRS. HEARST

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER.

NEW YORK, April 16.—The grill room of the fashionable Ritz Tower was the scene last evening of one of the most brilliant entertainments of the "little season," when Mrs. William Randolph Hearst entertained at supper and dancing in honor of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, who arrived in New York a few days ago en route from Florida and Mexico to their home in England.

The Sutherlands, who make annual trips to these shores, are highly popular in metropolitan society and during the English social season always entertain large groups of American friends at the Sutherland ancestral seat, Dunrobin Castle, and at their London residence, Hampden House.

Mrs. Hearst invited last evening a number of the close friends of the Sutherlands, and it was a jolly gathering, with dancing to the strains of Emil Coleman's orchestra.

During supper Mrs. Hearst's guests were entertained by the inimitable Phil Baker and the Cuban orchestra from the Havana Royal Casino.

Mrs. Hearst, who recently returned from Palm Beach, where she was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. Amcotts Wilson, is spending the spring season at her country home on Sands Point, the former home of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, who now resides permanently in France.

Each Sunday Mrs. Hearst entertains at luncheon at her Long Island estate and the Hearst luncheons have taken the place of the Sunday gatherings held for so many years by the late Mrs. Preston Pope Satterwhite, at Martin Hall, in Great Neck.

JACK'S WIFE SNUBS HIS BROTHER

Actress Declares She Will Do Nothing to Hurt Mate With His Admiring Public

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 16.—Joe Dempsey, brother of the former heavyweight boxing champion, today had made an unsuccessful attempt to see Estelle Taylor, the estranged wife of the ex-champion.

When he called at the Dempsey home he was told that Miss Taylor was not at home and was informed by servants that any communication he might have should be referred to Miss Taylor's attorney.

Hearing that her husband intended to file suit for divorce at Reno, Miss Taylor countered by announcing that she would file a divorce complaint here. She has told her attorney to notify her husband of the contemplated action, declaring she wished to get the divorce with as little publicity as possible.

WON'T SLUR JACK

While Estelle Taylor awaited developments in her plan to get a divorce here, she asserted she would not say a single word that would be derogatory to the former heavyweight champion.

Resting on a pile of pillows in a huge high backed chair, the screen actress said:

"I realize the esteem in which Jack is held by the public and I shall not tear down that esteem in any way.

"When I file suit for divorce, it will be on the least possible grounds, probably mental cruelty. We can't use incompatibility in this state.

TRIVIAL REASON

"It will be one of those things where I can say he didn't like lettuce and wouldn't let me have it in the house, or something."

Referring to a printed story in which she was quoted as having said Jack used her for a punching bag, Miss Taylor asserted:

"Look at me. I've been six years with a champion pugilist, but you don't see any scars, do you?"

She pointed to her heart, adding:

"The only scars I have are here."

DEMPSEY READY

RENO, Nev., April 16.—(INS.)—Having retained an attorney to file suit for divorce here, Jack Dempsey today had replied to Estelle Taylor's threat to "beat him to the punch."

Dempsey has retained the services of Dr. Robert E. Burns, prominent attorney.

When informed that Estelle still loved him, despite the fact she was going to file suit in 48 hours, Dempsey had nothing to say.

Dempsey had ceased talking. That he made clear. When his attorney is not present, his manager, Leonard Sachs, will serve as his mouthpiece.

CONGRESSMAN SENT TO PRISON

EVANSVILLE, Ind., April 16.—(AP.)—Convicted of accepting bribes for procuring postoffice appointments, Harry E. Rowbottom, former Indiana Congressman, must serve a year and a day in Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary and pay a fine of $2,000.

A federal court jury which deliberated two hours and five minutes last night found that Rowbottom accepted $750 from Walter G. Ayer for appointment of a son, Gresham Ayer, as rural mail carrier at Rockport, Ind., and that he received $800 for procuring the Dale, Ind., postmastership for S. Grant Johnson.

Rowbottom's attorneys indicated no appeal would be taken. At liberty under $10,000 bond, the former Congressman was ordered to report at Indianapolis April 20 to start his journey to the penitentiary.

Rowbottom's attorneys tried unsuccessfully to obtain probation for the defendant, on grounds he was a weakling physically, that others involved in the deals were not indicted, and that he was not of the mental calibre usually associated with the high office he held.

DRY ISSUE IN '32 WOMEN'S AIM

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(INS.)—Pledged to vote anti-dry regardless of party, the Women's Organization for National Prohibition reform, started a drive today to make prohibition the paramount issue in the 1932 presidential election.

A thousand members of the organization were homeward bound to 32 states after a two-day session. Armed with an expression favoring prohibition repeal by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and other leaders, they plan to take their cause to the women of the nation as based on "sanity" and the necessity for an end to a regime of "crime, racketeering and lawlessness which is fast injuring the moral fiber of the nation."

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, New York clubwoman and chairman of the organization, predicted amazing increases in the reform group's membership and declared honest women voters would soon make it impossible for the politician to dodge the prohibition issue.

RED CROSS SETS HIGHER GOAL

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(AP.)—To replenish its cash reserves, reduced by drought relief operations, the Red Cross, at the closing session of its annual convention today, set a minimum goal of 7,000,000 adult members for its next roll call.

The convention also adopted a resolution favoring continuance of the policy of financing Red Cross activities with the annual membership dues, recalling the organization's refusal to accept a $25,000,000 federal appropriation for drought aid.

The goal of 7,000,000 adult members compared with a present membership of 4,130,000 and a junior membership of 7,000,000. Some delegates thought the goal too high, but the resolution carried by an overwhelming vote.

MASSED RICHES DENOUNCED

ATLANTA, Ga., April 16.—(AP.)—A Catholic, a Jew and a Protestant laid aside their theological differences here last night to agree that wealth must be more equitably distributed if economic ills are to be avoided. They spoke at the annual convention of the Religious Education Association.

Father Michael Kennny, of Spring Hill College, Ala., cited that 96 per cent of the country's wealth is concentrated in the hands of 20 per cent of the population. He suggested that the Federal Council of Churches would have done better to advocate a more general sharing of wealth instead of birth control.

Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, of Pittsburgh, said modern economic life is now organized so that personal values are neglected. Dr. Harry Ward, professor of social ethics at the Union Theological Seminary, New York, stated that "unless economic forces can be brought into harmony with the ideals acknowledged in religion, art and science, westeren civilization cannot escape tearing itself asunder."

The sidewheel packet and excursion boat was to leave Pittsburgh today for Madison, Ind., where it was to be laid up for repairs before it would be used in excursion trade out of Memphis, Tenn.

In order to move the boat, the owners must post a bond twice the amount of the alleged indebtedness or pay the claim. The writ names the owners as the Pittsburgh Steamboat Company.

FAZIO ASKS RUM TERM PAROLE

Philip Fazio, acquitted in the barrel mystery murder of which William Gregory was the victim, appeared in Criminal Court before Judge George V. Moore late yesterday and petitioned to be paroled, having served one-third of a 15-month workhouse sentence imposed when he pleaded guilty to having manufactured and sold beer.

Judge Moore withheld action, saying he wanted to look into Fazio's record. Attorney William H. Coleman, who presented the petition, was not prepared to give the judge the information, saying he had not been Fazio's principal attorney, but had been called in to assist at the trial. Fazio's attorney was Frank J. Zappala, who was suspended recently from practicing in the court.

In the murder trial it was charged Fazio had killed Gregory, one of his beer runners, because Gregory had "double crossed" him.

ALFONSO PLANS RETURN TO SPAIN

circles accepted it as proof that the days of royalty had not vanished from Spain and predicted a return of their sovereign. Alfonso was quoted as saying:

"I renounce none of my rights, because they constitute a deposit accumulated by history, of which I shall have to render a strict account while in my keeping.

"Until the nation has spoken, I deliberately suspend the exercise of my royal power and depart from Spain, thus recognizing she is the sole mistress of her destinies."

OUTLINES CONVICTIONS

Refusing to believe that the people of Spain, ruled by monarchs for 15 centuries, with only brief intervals, were anything but monarchistic at heart, Alfonso outlined his convictions as follows:

"The elections held on Sunday revealed clearly to me that I have lost the love of my people. My conscience tells me that this disaffection will not be permanent because I have always served Spain. My only aim, even in the most critical circumstances, was public interest. A king can make mistakes and, without doubt, I have erred sometimes, but I well know that our country has always shown itself generous toward unmalicious faults.

"I am king of all Spaniards and I am Spanish myself. I could have employed divers means to keep the royal prerogatives and effectively fight my adversaries, but I wish to avoid everything that will throw my compatriots into fratricdal civil war."

ZAMORA IN PALACE

Equally confident that the republic had come to stay, Provisional President Zamora and members of his cabinet established themselves in the former royal palace and assumed the task of governing the land.

A thorough inventory was ordered of the contents of the historic building, which has witnessed many dramatic incidents within its walls.

Republican flags billowed everywhere in the capital and rejoicing continued, but the provisional administration already faces serious immediate problems. Disorders and rioting were reported raging in Barcelona, Seville and Bilbao. Drastic measures may become necessary to prevent a spread of these outbreaks and a split in the solidarity of the republic.

Hundreds of political exiles poured back into their native land, overjoyed at the establishment of the republic. But amidst the excitement there were also shouts by Communists and Syndicalists for participation in a government which they claimed owed them much.

TO CALL PARLIAMENT

In the midst of the national holiday decreed in official recognition of the republic, the provisional government proclaimed to the people that a constitutional parliament would be assembled at the earliest moment.

Under the signature of Provisional President Zamora, the government manifesto also pledged fair elections, religious freedom, justice for all, respect for property rights and a new economic dispensation through making the great landed estates profitable.

The decree announced titles would be abolished and the senators appointed by the King for life turned out of office.

The republican government was undecided on its future action in regards to the self-declared republic of Catalonia. Many Royalists, including Gen. Damaso Berenguer, have left the country. Chief of Police Mola, of Madrid, was arrested in attempting to leave Spain. A great ovation was tendered Maj. Ramon Franco on his return here from exile.

Queen Victoria Reaches Paris, Alfonso Marseilles

PARIS, April 16.—(INS.)—The royal family of Spain, ushered into exile with characteristic native courtesy as the ancient Bourbon monarchy changed to a republic, entered France by two different routes today en route to London.

King Alfonso, asserting he left the country to avert a civil war, but revealing he did not sign any articles of abdication, stepped upon French soil at Marseilles from the Spanish cruiser Principe Alfonso at 6:30 a. m.

Queen Victoria and four of her five children reached Paris from Hendaye at 9:20 a. m., to await further instructions from Alfonso. The infante Don Juan, third son of the royal couple, remained indefinitely at Gibraltar.

The famed Bourbon jewels, valued at $10,000,000, including the royal crown and ceremonial diamond-studded diadems, were brought here by the Queen, it was learned on good authority.

Forced to leave Spain 25 years to the day after she entered that country in triumph as Queen of Alfonso, Victoria was greeted here by a fervent group of friends and Royalist supporters.

Three hundred Spanish aristocrats bared their heads as the Queen descended from the train with her children. All the women awaiting her in the reception party were dressed in black.

QUEEN NEAR TEARS

With difficulty, apparently under great strain and striving to press back her tears, Queen Victoria passed between two lines of Royalists. They seized her hands and kissed them.

A crowd of 500 men and women nearly mobbed the royal party despite police details as it reached the street. The police cordon was rushed aside as hundreds pressed forward to kiss the hem of the Queen's dress.

In the hasty departure from Madrid, the royal family traveled as third-class tourists. The Queen wept constantly on the tiresome journey to Hendaye, where the greatest display of French gendarmerie seen since the war awaited her arrival. The train halted at Hendaye at 9 p. m.

The Prince of the Asturias, heir apparent to the Spanish throne, was so ill that he had to be carried quietly across the international bridge. Forty minutes later the party was en route to Paris on a fast train.

Belgian Queen Goes To Victoria in Paris

BRUSSELS, April 16.—(AP.)—Queen Elizabeth of Belgium left this morning for Paris to be with Queen Victoria of Spain.

Alfonso Refused Room at Hotel

MARSEILLES, April 16.—(INS.)—Don Alfonso de Bourbon, exiled King of Spain, was refused a room at a hotel here early today soon after his arrival from Spain aboard the cruiser Principe Alfonso.

The concierge of the establishment revealed to International News Service that he had failed to recognize the dethroned monarch when he applied for lodgings and told him:

"There is nothing left, sir."

Alfonso was astonished, and started to explain when the Duke of Miranda announced that the applicant was His Majesty the King. The concierge concluded:

"Then it was my turn to be astonished."

WILKINS PLANS GREETING FOR ECKENER

Zeppelin, Submarine Would Meet in Arctic; Visions Help in Mooring Graf

Sir Hubert Wilkins, world-renowned explorer, and Dr. Hugo Eckener, famous skipper of the trans-oceanic dirigible, Graf Zeppelin, revealed they have a "date" to meet at the North Pole.

Sir Hubert expects to go there under the ice in his submarine, Nautilus.

Dr. Eckener expects to go there by air in the Graf, largest dirigible ever to attempt so perilous a voyage.

If the gods of luck and courage are kind, and Sir Hubert is able to thrust his bearded visage up through the ice at the pole at the appointed time, while the rotund Dr. Eckener descends from the clouds—it would provide a feat of high drama such as would thrill the world.

Sir Hubert's views on the undertaking and its probabilities for success are herewith given.

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS

YONKERS, N. Y., April 16.—As one who has traversed the Arctic by air, I can readily envision the Graf Zeppelin, on which I traveled around the world, swooping out of the clouds above the North Pole, whilst we of the transpolar submarine, Nautilus, stand there on the ice ready to help moor the great dirigible.

As readily I can envision Dr. Eckener, in befurred Arctic garb, climbing down the Graf's swaying ladder and striding with gusto across the ice to clasp our hands.

Having been aboard the Graf Zeppelin for many days, I have a high opinion, but a justifiable one, I believe, of Dr. Eckener's ability to set out in the dirigible and bring her to a certain point at a certain hour. Indeed, I regard Dr. Eckener's willingness to meet us at the Pole as a splendid tribute to the soundness of our plan.

SEES BELIEF IN PLAN

Unless he believed it reasonably certain that the Nautilus would arrive at the Pole and be willing there to greet him, I do not think he would be willing to arrange a rendezvous.

We talked the whole thing over when we last met, and he not only regards our Arctic trip as feasible, but entertains the greatest expectation that it will be crowned with success.

The simultaneous flight of the Zeppelin to the "top of the world" holds this possibility—that in case we were to meet disaster, and perhaps be stranded in the vicinity of the pole, with only our emergency rations to sustain us, that Dr. Eckener could bring us all off alive in the dirigible.

ANTICIPATES THRILL

While, of course, our scientific program does not depend on meeting Dr. Eckener at the Pole, nevertheless we are happy to know that Dr. Eckener makes it possible for the Zeppelin to meet us. I can only say that it would give me a thrill unsurpassed since that day, at Point Barrow, Alaska, when I saw Lincoln Ellsworth and Roald Amundsen descend in the North after their famouse flight across the Pole from Spitzbergen.

It is not yet finally decided Dr. Eckener will make the voyage. He is willing and ready to do so, provided the adventure can be suitably financed. Both he and I have hopes that this can be arranged.

HOLMES SHOWS CORONATION

The coronation of Haile Sellassie as emperor of Abyssinia, with all its pomp and ceremony and color and dignity was shown last night by Burton Holmes in the last of his season's travel talks at the Carnegie Music Hall. Such a display of gorgeous costumes has not been seen anywhere in the world for generations and dignitaries from practically every country on the globe attended to pay respect to the new emperor.

Thousands of natives in tiger and leopard skin finery, military and deplomatic guests in full dress, including the Duke of Gloucester, all gathered at Addis-Abada, in the interior of Ethiopia, to attend the ceremonies. Mr. Holmes was dressed in a lavish Abyssinian costume presented to him by the Emperor and his pictures of the actual coronation were clear and interesting.

P. S. C. ADVISED RATE 'LIFT'

been written by Brecht to Ehlers which said:

"I do not know what your method will be of increasing the figures of fair value, but it occurs that you might be able to justify a higher estimate on a few of the items on physical property upon which the engineers did not agree.

ADVISED "LIFTING"

"Could not item D be lifted $8,000 or $10,000? How about item H? Might not that be allowed a little stretch of $10,000?

"These questions are asked not in the way of criticism, but with a view of ehlping you, or rathe r of making me feel that I did not desert you."

The letter was written on official Public Service Commission stationery.

'Bonesetter' Reese Seriously Sick

YOUNGSTOWN, O. April 16—(AP.)—John D. (Bonesetter) Reese, nationally known, is seriously ill at his home here. He is 75.

Blue Law Defense Answered

Keller. Throughout the state there have been decisions which have interpreted baseball playing, gasoline selling and even ordinary vehicular transportation as criminal. It places the citizen to great expense and harassment to have to appeal to a higher court.

SPORTS NOT BANNED

Judge Keller said:

"This old act is not one-half so blue, not one-half so rigorous and not one-half so forbidding as many think. There is nothing in the act to prohibit Sunday golf or a quiet game of baseball played by your boys, if they do not interfere with divine worship or the peace and good order of the neighborhood. Many necessary activities are permitted. Overstrict enforcement of the law sometimes does more harm than good, and the courts have clearly recognized this. Things that were not necessities in 1794 are necessities now. As people grow and advance, the law grows with them.

STANDS FOR LAW

"I am not going to go so far as to say a Christian should do all the things permitted by this law. That is up to his own conscience. I stand for the law and for its reasonable and sensible enforcement. Church members who take an active part in church work are people of influence in their communities.

"I want to see your influence exercised for the sane enforcement of the present law. If an attempt is made here in favor of an open and notorious violation of the law, for the purpose of making money, fight it. But don't waste your time tilting with windmills, and don't bring prosecutions in cases that are so near the borderline that an honest doubt may exist, for such cases are likely to be thrown out of court."

MUSMANNO'S VIEWS

Representative Musmanno today expressed his views as follows:

"As a member of the bar and as one who greatly admires Judge Keller, I speak with great deference in commenting at all on his speech concerning the Pennsylvania blue laws. Judge Keller is entirely right in criticising those who bring unnecessary prosecutions which harass good people who engage in some of the most innocent diversions imaginable at such hours as cannot possibly conflict with church services.

"I think the people of Allegheny County, however, would prefer, and if permitted to vote on the question, would so indicate by their ballot, to go a little further than is permitted by the strict interpretation of the Statute of 1794.

"Not all judges have interpreted the law with the same splendid tolerance advocated by Judge Keller.

"Throughout the various parts of the state there have been decisions which have interpreted baseball playing, gasoline selling and even ordinary vehicular transportation as criminal.

"I do not think that the Superior Court would uphold such decisions, but it places the citizen to a great expense and embarassment to have to appeal to a higher court.

REFERENDUM HERE

"The people of Allegheny county decided by a referendum last year that they would like a modification of the law of 1794.

"They feel that if they wish to go even toe a professional ball game on Sunday afternoon that there can be nothing immoral about that. It is done in Washington, and what is considered entirely in accord with the principles of our republic in the capital of the nation certainly cannot be wrong in Pennsylvania, one of the original states of the Union.

"The people would like to enjoy symphony concerts on Sunday without constant threat of arrest.

"Boys would like to play football in the autumn and they would like to play it openly and not have to do it surreptitiously.

"As Judge Keller well says, there is too much 'fanatical enforcement and tilting with windmills.' As, for instance, witness the action last summer of those who made vigorous protest the opening of a swimming pool in Dormont on Sundays, and this, by the way, during the hottest part of the summer when children were in great distress on account of the excessive heat."

BLUE LAW GIVEN

Here is the Act of April 22, 1794, over which so much agitation has been aroused:

"Sec. 1—That from and after the first day of August next, if any person shall do or perform any worldly employment or business whatsoever on the Lord's Day common called Sunday (works of necessity and charity only excepted) or shall use or practice any unlawful game, hunting, shooting, sport or diversion whatsoever on the same day and be convicted thereof, every such person so offending shall for every such offense, forfeit and pay $4 to be levied by distress; or in case he or she shall refuse or neglect to pay the said sum, or goods and chattels cannot be found, whereof to levy the same by distress, he or she shall suffer 6-days imprisonment in the house of correction, of the proper county.

EXCEPTIONS MADE

"Provided always that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit the dressing of victuals in private families, bake houses, lodging houses, inns and other houses of entertainment for the use of sojourners travelers or strangers, or to hinder watermen from landing their passengers, or ferrymen from carrying over the waters travelers or persons removing their families on the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, nor to the delivery of milk or the necessities of life before nine of the clock in the fornoon nor after five of the clock in the afternoon of the same day."

Shoe Shine Rights On Boats Bring $31,975

NEW YORK, April 16.—(AP.)—Tony Andriola has paid $29,975 for the privilege of shining shoes on the Staten Island ferries for two years. Tony himself doesn't wield the brushes and flannel rags. He hires others for that.

He paid $2,000 additional for the bootblack concession on the Hamilton avenue ferries. He was one of the important bidders at the city's biennial auction of concessions rights to lunch counters, flower stands, news stands and restaurants on city property.

The bootblack business is booming, apparently, for the shine concessions brought just about as much as they did in 1929. Prices on other concessions were lower by one-third to a half.

3 ADRIFT SAVED BY SHIP CREW

NEW YORK, April 16.—Three men, adrift in their disabled motorboat 350 miles off Cape Hatteras for 13 days, were rescued by the crew of an oil tanker, according to word received here today. The men are Joseph Knight, Joseph Roberts and Carlyn Montecino, of Miami, Fla.

The rescue was effected by Capt. J. J. MacMillan and members of the crew of the Tide Water Oil Company's tanker, Samuel Q. Brown. The men were in a weakened condition when taken aboard, the message said, and were suffering mostly from lack of drinking water.

Honor Ann Harding At Aircraft Show

DETROIT, April 16.—(AP.)—Women fliers were guests of honor for "ladies' day" at the National Aircraft show today. One feature of the program was a ceremony in honor of Ann Harding, motion picture actress, who has taken up aviation and who came here for delivery of a plane she bought. Another was an airplane ride—her first—for Mrs. Emma Fox, 84, noted parliamentarian.

JUNK DEALERS' FEE SUSPENDED

Suspension of the licensing of junk dealers by the Department of Public Safety was ordered by Council's Committee on Hearings yesterday, following protest of 35 dealers, who declared the industrial depression had so injured their business that they were unable to pay their annual license fees of $25.

On motion of Chairman John S. Herron, Council instructed the department not to arrest junkmen who lack 1931 permits, pending an ordinance to be introduced. It was intimated the fee would be reduced to $5.

The petitioners, mostly small dealers, were represented by Attorney Harold Lavine. Anna B. Heldman, of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, testified as to the justice of their appeal.

"Pharmacy Night" will be celebrated for the fourth time tomorrow night by the Duquesne University School of Pharmacy under the direction of Dr. Hugh C. Muldoon, dean. Students and faculty of the School of Pharmacy will preside at booths showing new medicines, chemical, bacteriological and botanical displays, commercial design, first aid and hospital dispensing.

Entertainment will include novelty dances by women students, a concert by the university symphonic jazz orchestra and a one-act play "The Mayor and the Manicure." These three features will be presented in the Campus Theater at 8:45 o'clock. Souvenirs will be presented to the women visitors. The exhibition is open to the public. Members of the Monogram Club, athletic lettermen's association will act as guides. Refreshments will be served.

Berlin's Mayor, 7 Feet Tall, Joke Target

BERLIN, April 16.—(AP)—If cartoons and wisecracks connote popularity, Berlin's new Lord Mayor, Heinrich Sahm, with his height of 7 feet 1 inch should become one of the best known municipal executives in Europe during his 12-year term.

His stature has been cartooned in every possible pose, columnists find that jokes at the expense of his size are much appreciated and spring rhymsters, otherwise devoted to love sonnets, have discovered he is one of the best subjects for lyric effusions.

Chinese Bandit Slayer Beheaded

SHANGHAI, April 16.—(INS.)—The notorious Chekiang outlaw, Hautiew-Yung, was beheaded at a public execution today, along with his brother and aide-de-camp.

Charged with responsibility for 1,000 capital crimes, the bandit leader met death scornfully.

HEBREW SCHOOL HEAD SPEAKS

The work of the Hebrew University of Palestine was described by Dr. Judah L. Magnes, chancellor, at a banquet held last night in his honor in Webster Hall. One hundred and fifty professional men and women attended the banquet. Dr. Magnes is guest of the Hebrew Institute of Pittsburgh.

In telling of the university, Dr. Magnes said it was founded six years ago with six instructors and today it has 60 teachers on its staff. He urged all present to become foster alumnae of the university to help promote work at the institution.

The speaker was introduced by Prof. Alexander Silverman, dean of the chemistry department of the University of Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGHERS IN SHIP CRASH

News that his daughter, Nancy Walter Canetta, was a passenger, with her husband, John Canetta, Westinghouse electrical engineer, aboard the French steamer Florida, rammed off the coast of Spain by Britain's H. M. S. Glorious, has reached Christ Walter, Pittsburgh artist. Both were unhurt. Mr. Walter has received a letter from his daughter, describing the collision, which occurred during British war fleet maneuvers off Gibraltar.

The Canettas were returning to the United States from Buenos Aires by way of Europe.

Three Die in River As Ice Gives Way

ROBERVAL, Que., April 16.—(AP.)—Mrs. Elzear Tremblay, 52, her son, Paul, 18, and her six-year-old nephew were drowned here yesterday when the ice broke under them while they were crossing the Mistassiki River.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, April 16.

THIS WOULD BE as good a spot as any, I suppose, for the honest-to-goodness tale of the two reporters whom I am pleased to call Eddie and Joe. Both boys were in their middle twenties, and they covered police headquarters in a fair-sized city in the middle west. And inasmuch as they worked in opposition for the only two papers the city boasted, they were that much-abused term—friendly rivals.

Eddie was by far the better writer of the two. He was a college graduate, called himself a journalist, and was working on the three or four great American novels at one and the same time. On the other hand, while Joe was no great shakes as a writer, he was the son of a local lieutenant of police. And that made everything more than even in covering police headquarters.

When there was nothing stirring, which was often, Eddie and Joe would play pinochle and discuss their ideas for the future.

"As far as I'm concerned," Joe would assert, "I'm going to stay right in this reporting racket. Not much dough, but plenty of fun. This is the life for me."

Whereupon Eddie would shake his dome in lofty fashion.

"That's where you're wrong, Joe," he would say. "You have no soul.

"Soon I shall finish my first thrill novel. Sooner than you expect. And then, when it is sold and I am recognized as a great novelist, I will travel and be content. That is life.

"I'm just sticking to this putrid job as a means to an end. It keeps me from starving and buys me a suit every once in a while. But I hate it, Joe. And I'm getting out of it as soon as I sell my first book."

One morning, after Eddie had been chirping in that fashion for months, he appeared at headquarters and waved a neatly-typed manuscript under the rival's nose.

"This is it," he announced triumphantly. "This is my first novel. My thrill novel that will startle America. I've finally finished it. And today it goes out to a New York publisher."

Joe asked to see it.

"Nothing doing," cried Eddie. "You can see it when it comes out in book form. You can read it when I'm earning enough money to quit this rotten job."

Joe shrugged his shoulders and turned back to work . . .

In the following six months Eddie's novel cost him more in postage stamps than he would ever receive in royalties. It was rejected by so many publishers and agents that I'm quite certain it must have jumped into its return envelope of its own accord.

Finally, after it had been sent back for the thirty-fourth time, Eddie tossed it over to Joe in a discouraged fashion.

"I want you to read my thrill novel, Joe," he said. "I think it's great, but the publishers don't seem to understand it."

So Joe read the great thrill novel. It proved to be a terrible piece of junk. All about a masked marvel at the art of burglary and how the suave gentleman was a pickle packer by day and a safecracker by night. The author led the masked marvel through a series of adventures that were slightly less than hysterical.

Without saying anything to Eddie, Joe went to his father, the police lieutenant, the following morning.

"Look here, pop," he asserted, "Eddie's written a novel that I've just finished reading. It's pretty awful and I know he'll never sell it. But I'd like to give him the kick of seeing his story in print.

"Suppose we dig up some tramp and get him to agree to let me put this story in my paper with him as the hero. My sheet will run it and Eddie will get a great thrill. Will you stand for it?"

The lieutenant thought it over for a moment and then nodded.

"I do not see why not," he said. "It's okay with me."

So Joe marched into the jail and dug up his tramp. The latter was a boozy old gent who gladly accepted Joe's $2 and scrawled his name on a piece of paper. Then, with Eddie's novel before him, Joe hammered out a newspaper story on the tramp's amazing career and shot it over to his paper. Eddie's paper, of course, received no such story.

Several hours later, when the story was on the streets, Eddie stormed into headquarters and shook his fist at Joe.

"You ungrateful rat," he shouted. "A fine friend you are!"

Joe wrinkled his brow.

"Gee, Eddie," he muttered, "I had no idea you'd take it this way. I thought that when you saw your novel boiled down as a newspaper story, you'd get a thrill."

Eddie gulped.

"Thrill, hell," he returned. "My paper just fired me because you scooped me on my own story!" . . .

WITH THE DEATH of Maurice Abrahams, husband of Belle Baker, another sweet guy on Broadway passes from the picture. Morrie was a swell chap and I regret his going more than any I can recall in a long time. Belle and Morrie were a very happy Broadway couple. It took death to part them.

Since the line between tragedy and comedy is such a thin one, I might as well terminate Morrie's obituary with a little story we both enjoyed telling from time to time. I imagine Morrie would like it better that way.

When I was in Hollywood on my honeymoon a few years back, Belle Baker gave a dinner for your humble servant and his wife, who was formerly known as Gladys Glad and is now known as Gladys Glad. Belle outdid herself on that dinner, and both the wife and I enjoyed ourselves immensely.

All during the dinner, Morrie kept hinting at a surprise to come.

"Just wait until you see what Belle has arranged for you, Mark," he said. "I'm not going to tell you what it is because it's a big surprise. Just wait."

When it was time for the dessert, Belle arose from the table with a smile and went into the kitchen. Soon we heard her talking loudly. Morrie excused himself and followed her. Then he began to talk loudly.

A few minutes later, we learned the cause of the trouble. Belle had gone to the trouble and expense of ordering a cake that had been made in the shape of a newspaper. Across the top, a headline told the story of my marriage and, to complete the thing, the icing carried several of my articles. That cake must have cost Belle and Morrie a young fortune.

The cake had been delivered a few hours before. And the Swedish cook, who could read no English, had cut it into bits before anyone saw it! . . .

REBUILD YOUR STRENGTH
the new strength that comes with taking S.S.S.
. . . particularly is this IMPORTANT in the spring, after colds, flu and sickness

MANY are weakened by the epidemics of colds and flu in winter and the body therefore has less resistance against further disease attacks.

When your vitality is low—you feel weak—have lost your appetite, the chances are that cold or the flu or some other sickness has destroyed many of your red-blood-cells and your body has not the strength to properly assimilate and use the food you eat.

When your red-blood-cells are reduced to 80% you are not yourself. 60% is dangerous. Your body may be demanding more red-blood-cells. You need these health-building and health-sustaining cells to build and repair tissue and give you strength.

S.S.S. is famed for its ability to increase the red-blood-cells. This is why for over 100 years it has been popular for toning up the system—especially in the spring. And being purely vegetable, S.S.S. has no harmful effects upon the system.

Every spring countless thousands take S.S.S. to build back their red-blood-cells so that they may have that new strength which makes for a keen appetite, firm flesh, a clear skin and greater resistance against infection and disease. You, too, will want to take S.S.S. for this very reason. Select the larger size as it holds double the quantity and represents a price-saving.

NEWS ABOUT HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM LIFE; LOCAL THEATER NOTES

Cap and Gown 'Girls' Are Reminders of Greece And Old England

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When Jane Cowl plays Viola in "Twelfth Night" in the Alvin this week she is doing something that wasn't being done till nearly half a century after Shakespeare died.

When the Cap and Gown Club of Pitt University presents "What's Up" in the Nixon next week, and prance around the stage as dainty lassies, they are reverting to the earlier ages of the theater, when all women's parts were played by men.

No women appeared on the English stage until 1663, when Charles II, the Merry Monarch, first gave permission for women to act. About 30 years earlier a French company had come to London with women actors, and these ladies were driven off the stage with hisses and bombardment of apples.

George Seibel

The first actress to play a woman's part in English was either Margaret Hughes or Ann Marshall, both of whom appeared in 1663 at Drury Lane, one of the two licensed theaters of London.

In other countries, especially France, women were on the stage much earlier. Moliere's wife was an actress, and there was a long line of charming and talented French women, of whom Adrienne Lecouvreur was the most distinguished.

But in France also actresses were not treated very well by church and state. When Adrienne died she was refused burial in consecrated ground and her body was thrown into a lime pit. This may have been done to remove evidences of poisoning by a jealous member of the aristocracy. But Adrienne was immortalized in a splendid ode by Voltaire.

SHAKESPEARE'S BOY ACTORS

In the Shakespearean company the roles of women were assumed by boys. A boy of 14 first played Juliet, which explains why Shakespeare made Juliet 14 years of age. Boys could play Portia, Rosalind or Viola, and easily deceive the audience as to their sex when disguised as men. That is something actresses of today can rarely do. That is also the reason why Shakespeare has so many women disguise themselves as men in his plays. It is also the reason why there are comparatively few women in any of his casts. There were no actresses in the Shakespearean theater.

We know what players had the various parts, and it is interesting to recall that Robert Goffe first played Juliet in 1591 and Ophelia in 1593. In that performance of "Hamlet" Alexander Cook played the Queen. He must have been tall and stately, for he also played Katherine in "The Taming of the Shrew."

The first Desdemona on record was played by Jack Wilson, who also played Ophelia and other parts which had songs in them. Evidently Jack had a sweet voice.

Cleopatra and other vamps were played by John Edmans, who must have been able to make up as a beauty like our American Julian Eltinge. On the other hand, William Eccleston was a little scrub of a boy, and he was given parts like Nerissa, Portia's maid. Nicholas Tooley played comedy characters and was probably the original Nurse in "Romeo and Juliet."

ON THE GREEK STAGE

Shakespeare's boys playing feminine roles were continuing the tradition of the theater which goes back to the days of the Greeks. No women appeared on the Greek stage. Among about 500 Greek actors of whom we have knowledge, there wasn't a single woman.

Of course it was easy for the Greek actors to assume any sort of character, because their faces were never seen. They wore masks, according to the part represented. There were 28 kinds of standard masks for different characters, and hundreds of special masks for strange characters like one-eyed giants or the birds of Aristophanes.

The first actor, Phrynichus, to represent female roles probably was his own dramatist as most dramatists were their own actors. The number of actors in Greek plays was very small, one man reappearing under various masks as the number of characters was increased.

We know that Theodoros played both Jocasta and Antigone in the "Phoenician Women" of Euripides. This actor appeared before Alexander the Great, playing Merope or Hekabe in another play of Euripides. He also played Electra in the tragedy of Sophocles.

The very famous actor, Athenodoros, acted Antigone in a tragedy by Astydamas, and another famous actor, Aristodemos, played Antigone of Sophocles. Every actor had some specialty—there was even one actor, Apollogenes, who also was a pugilist, and generally had roles in which he could display his fistic skill.

Some of these actors must have had tremendous power to sway their audiences, which often numbered 30,000. Polus of Aegina, of whom it is reported that he taught elocution to Demosthenes, the famous orator, once played the Electra of Sophocles, and moved his vast audience to tears. Afterward it was learned that he had come on the stage bearing an urn, in which were the ashes of his own son who had died a few days before, and that he did this in order to give sincerity to his acting. Few players nowadays would go to such extremes to get an effect.

From these hurried glimpses of the stage in the "spacious times of great Elizabeth" and in the golden age of Athens it will be seen that women are newcomers in the theater. Well, they have won an equal place for themselves with the men. Rachel is no less renowned than Kean. And since Florenz Ziegfeld came upon the scene, the poor men have been pushed back into the wings. Only occasionally can they assert their ancient rights, as in the Cap and Gown production next week in the Nixon.

NOTES ABOUT COMING ATTRACTIONS

Owing to the demand for seats for "Death Takes a Holiday" in the Pitt, George Sharp announces that the play will be held over another week. Seats are now on sale for all performances. Paul McGrath and Anne Forrest are in the leading roles.

"Cracked Nuts," latest film comedy of Wheeler and Woolsey, comes to the Stanley tomorrow. Peter Higgins will be guest master of ceremonies.

Joseph Cawthorn, who has a leading role in support of William Haines in "A Tailor Made Man," opening tomorrow in the Penn, has been a stage celebrity ever since the days when he first appeared in vaudeville as one of the "Cawthorn Children." On the Penn stage will be Ted Lewis.

William Powell's first talking screen drama in seven months, "Man of the World," in which he plays the blackmailing editor of a Parisian scandal sheet, will open in the Fulton and Sheridan Square tomorrow. Carole Lombard and Wynne Gibson head the supporting cast.

"Don't Bet on Women," a sophisticated love comedy, co-starring Edmund Lowe and Jeannette MacDonald, opens tomorrow as the feature in the Aldine. The cast includes Roland Young, Una Merkel and J. M. Kerrigan.

A new burlesque production, "Hot Hips," will be presented in the Academy, beginning with a Sunday midnight show.

Paul Muni to Try Films Again, This Time As 'Scarface'

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, April 16.

With the studios continually scouting the New York stage for talent the element of time seemed the only obstacle keeping Paul Muni from returning to Hollywood.

Apparently this is being overcome, as negotiations are on between Howard Hughes and the actor for him to play the title role in "Scarface."

This will mark Muni's second attempt in the movies. When talkies first started he was under long term contract to Fox and was featured in "Seven Faces East" and "The Valiant." At that time he felt that he was not getting the roles he deserved and the contract was amicably dissolved.

"Scarface," which deals with Capone's life, goes into production next month regardless of the cry that underworld stories have run their course. Howard Hawks will direct and William Boyd has been borrowed from Paramount for another of his gangster portrayals.

Armitage Trail wrote "Scarface" and Fred Pasley, author of "The Life of Capone," and Seaton Miller are preparing the screen story.

LATEST GOSSIP

Charles Chaplin is reported as having agreed to write a series of articles for a nationally circulated magazine. They will deal with his current European trip. The report continues to the effect that he has discovered a new screen personality in Florelle Constantine. Tests are being made of his new find at the Paramount studios near Paris. Hoot Gibson will arrive from Honolulu on the 17th, to make final arrangements for his forthcoming rodeo. Sally Eilers, who would not make the trip to Hawaii with "The Black Camel" company unless Hoot accompanied her, returns with the troupe on the 21st. Regardless of spring Lew Ayres and Lola Lane are having one of those tifts. Starting on April 20, Martha Sheridan Stanton, who is in charge of the literary course at U. S. C., will talk over a local radio on screen personalities. Until now her weekly broadcasts have been book reviews, but several thousand requests have caused her to include the movie stars and picture reviews with her literary work. The first star to be discussed will be Constance Bennett. "Jumping" Joe Savoldi is going to crash the movies not through his football prowess, but through his wrestling ability. He is to appear in an added sequence in "Women of All Nations," which features Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen.

Constance Bennett

ONE DEFINITE SOLUTION

A story is going the rounds about the independent producer who made a mystery-crime serial in 12 episodes.

When ready for release he ran the first 11 reels for an exhibitor, and then asked:

"Who do you think committed the crime?"

"The director," shouted the exhibitor as he made for the nearest exit.

I'LL BE SEEING YOU

Since Harpo Marx arrived in Hollywood he has been invited to entertain at so many parties that he is becoming a bit irked at the idea.

A few days ago a young lady approached him with an invitation that he seemed loath to accept.

"But Harpo," she implored. "You know these people. You met them on the Riviera last year."

"Tell them I'll meet them on the Riviera next year," replied the comedian.

LEGION SHOW TO AID JOBLESS

Swissvale's unemployed will be aided through a benefit production to be given by the Sketch Club and sponsored by the John W. Brooks Post, American Legion, in the Swissvale High School May 6, 7 and possibly May 8.

Proceeds will be used by the post to provide work for unemployed ex-service men of the borough in remodeling its home and beautifying the grounds. The home will be made suitable for community affairs.

The production, "Three Live Ghosts," is being directed by Thomas J. O'Brien, president of the Sketch Club. In the cast are Catherine Barclay, Virginia O'Baker, John Fullen, Frank C. Shane, James O'Brien, Thomas W. Shane, Jr., Eileen Boyd, Andrew Michael, Robert Lennon and Ann Kirsch. The technical staff includes James Whalen, Donald Madigan and Joseph P. Gorham. The Legion committee is Commander D. L. Bardes, Dr. W. T. Pyle, John Allen, A. F. Koch, Walter Tomlinson and Dr. H. S. Kopsofsky.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

As if Lillian Roth will lose any sleep over what the newspapers are saying about her sudden marriage to that Pittsburgh lad . . . She found love—and she married it—so more power to her . . . The rags titter a little because when Lillian played at the Palace two months ago (is it that long?) she received the news of her young sweetheart's death back stage and grieved so . . . Now she is gay again and why shouldn't she be? . . . Dryden chirped that love is not in our choice, but in our fate . . . It is a woman's privilege to remember and a man's to forget.

What a lotta junk came out of the air waves about 8 o'clock Monday night . . . The major stations must have been desperate for diverting entertainers . . . You got a cramp in your fingers twisting the dial searching for something that didn't give you an earache . . . Somebody recently summed up the air sitch-ee-ay-shun beautifully . . . By saying that the broadcasting directors were glorifying mediocrity . . . The grandest of the capsule criticisms . . . The rags are saying that the Dempseys haven't been dwelling together for two years . . . When that was first published two years ago Dempsey wanted to slug the "fellow" who wrote it. . . . Say, a good news beat is worth one of Dempsey's slugs . . . Too bad about Belle Baker's "Morrie" going like that . . . Nearly everyone of the Broadway boys who have passed on lately were the nicest guys . . . The good die young, is right . . . That's why Broadway is so congested.

Is it decent of Mr. Tyler, the producer, and Mr. Hampden, the actor, to fill up all that space in the papers belittling the dramatic critics . . . For a while it seemed as though nobody was taking us seriously—or to heart, anymore . . . Mr. Tyler says that most of the first-nighters go to the play to see what is the matter with it. . . . Well, of course! . . . Woollcott once amusingly said that the critics should be thanked instead of spanked . . . That the critics were a lot like the slaves in the olden times—who, before the noblemen and their guests dined or drank, had to sample the stuff—and if they lived—then goody, goody—the others would sit down and feast and never worry about poisoned wines or fowl . . . And if the slaves died—then what of it? . . . It is Goldsmith's polite advice that the critic should always take care to say that the picture would have been better if the painter had taken more pains . . . What the Tylers and Hampdens overlook is that the critic represents a newspaper—a newspaper represents the people—and that

AVOID UGLY BLEMISHES

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition, pimply face.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound; known by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

WHAT SKINNY MEN OUGHT TO KNOW

You probably know that Cod Liver Oil is the greatest flesh producer in the world.

Because it contains more vitamins than any food you can get.

You'll be glad to know that Cod Liver Oil comes in sugar-coated tablets now, so if you really want to put 10 or 20 pounds of real healthy flesh on your bones and feel well and strong ask your druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets.

Only 60 cents for 60 tablets and if you don't gain five pounds in 30 days your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

It isn't anything unusual for a person to gain 10 pounds in 30 days.

"Get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet."

THE LOUDSPEAKER -:- By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, April 16.—Save for brief interludes, blackface comedy has always held the throne-room of the American amusement realm.

There was a time—it lasted for the better part of a year—when no day in the republic was complete without an ear cupped to Moran and Mack. Massa Jolson and Massa Cantor erected their impressive gold mines upon a foundation of burnt cork. There is always a public—save in New York—for a minstrel show. Amos 'n' Andy remain the emperors of the ether in spite of the soothsayers who predicted that six months on the networks would bring an end to their popularity.

Except in the case of blackface comedians radio popularity is the briefest of all entertainment popularity. In the endless prosession to the microphone this or that personality is singled out. He occupies the limelight for a period and then gives way, as, of course, he must, before the ceaseless tramp of feet and din of voices behind him.

Consider the case of M. Vallee. In a world weary of wisecracks he introduced with the aid of a moonstruck megaphone and one or two glamorous ballads a note of wistful romance. He rose in six short months from obscurity to a dazzling pedestal of fame. He heard the call of Hollywood. It was a strategic mistake. He withdrew temporarily from the microphones to prospect in the movie gold fields. The hiatus was disastrous to his vogue. When he returned to radio, romantic-hungry America had satisfied its hunger and had turned to new idols.

Television mail is reaching Christmastide proportions in postoffices. Its present is outlined. Its progress is defined. Its future is discussed with adjectives that would daunt even Dexter Fellows. Jumbling the descriptions all together one significant idea is apparent. Television when it comes on a big scale will be closely allied with the motion picture projector.

Sitting in your armchair you will hear entertainment from a turn of the dial and see it flashed from "an eye" on the television receiver's panel to a wall screen. You will be able to have an intimate picture—please don't disturb the old prophet—of the Kentucky Derby, the Army-Notre Dame, the latest pawing of the heavyweights to the accompaniment of your favorite band on the phonograph attachment.

Broadcasters have now extended their surveys into every phase of life save the depletion of the forests necessary for their press announcements.

No limit on the microphone yet has been reached musically to Italian and Hawaiian serenades.

The most optimistic people in radio are those who believe they hold an audience with large guests of ballyhoo at 15-minute intervals.

After years on the cretonned cogswells I have reached the conclusion that the boys at Annapolis have the most stirring marching song, just as the boys at Princeton have the most stirring alma mater chant.

There comes a time in the life of the average listener when even Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite" can be dinned too much into the ears.

Only once and no more have these old ears caught the snarling accent on the word, "hypocrites" on the loudspeaker.

The organ grinder is the only dispenser of music abroad in the land who has not yet been led up to a studio recital.

The hopes of the broadcasters for the time when grand opera will be created for radio show no signs of fulfillment. But the hopes continue. The fact that such an opera should be limited to an hour, explains, perhaps, why the broadcasters are not realizing their dream.

Spirituals to Be Feature on KDKA Tonight

Dials are being twirled all over the country Thursday evenings to hear that most unusual radio program, the Dixie Spiritual Singers, whose melodious harmonies come straight from the factory where Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco is made in Richmond, Virginia.

This program, which comes at 8 o'clock direct from Richmond, consists of the spirituals and work songs which have been handed down among the negroes of the tobacco country for generations.

The singers themselves are real workers, untrained in professional concert singing, but possessed of rich natural voices and long accustomed to harmonizing together. This Edgeworth presentation has already caused critics to hail the Dixie Spiritual Singers as being unique on the air.

Following the traditions of real Southern spiritual singing, the Dixie Spiritual Singers use neither notes nor musical accompaniment. In fact, many of their songs have not been set down in musical form. This unusual program is something no radio listener should miss. The Dixie Spiritual Singers are on Station KDKA and the NBC Blue network every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

Catarrhal Deafness May Be Relieved.

A Simple, Safe and Reliable Way That Calls For No Ugly Trumpets, Phones or Other Instruments

To have catarrhal deafness is very annoying and embarrassing. People who are deaf in this way are generally mighty sensitive on this subject. And yet many catarrhal deaf folks carry around instruments that call attention to their infirmity. Therefore people who are hard of hearing, who suffer from head noises or who are actually deaf from catarrhal trouble, will be glad to know of a simple treatment that can be easily made up at home for a few cents cost that is really quite efficient in relieving the disagreeable deafness and head noises caused by catarrh.

From May-Liggett's or any druggist get one ounce of Parmint (double strength). Take this home and put it into a simple syrup made of ¼ pint of hot water and a little ordinary sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This treatment should by tonic action reduce the inflammation in the middle ear, that a catarrhal condition would be likely to cause, and with the inflammation gone, the distressing head noises, headaches, cloudy thinking and that dull feeling in the ears should gradually disappear. Anyone who suffers from catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises should give Parmint a trial. It is pleasant to take and is quite inexpensive.

BUSINESS depression? Undoubtedly there has been—but not in the sales of "Standard" Gasoline in Pennsylvania!

In a year when any sales increase is news "Standard" sales in this state have doubled.

This means that:—For every Pennsylvania motorist who pulled up to a big red "Standard" pump at this time last year, today there are two—and the number is still growing. What's the explanation?

Try "Standard" and find out. You'll notice it smells clean (no motor-damaging sulphides)—picks up faster in traffic—gives far less knocks than the average of all gasolines (except those selling at a premium). You'll see when you use it why "Standard" is Pennsylvania's fastest gasoline success.

Finds Quick Way To End Acid, Gas Misery

"I've suffered my last spell of sour stomach," says H. K. White, of 2519 Washington Boulevard, Chicago. "I found out that by taking ACIDINE three or four nights a week, I never have that uncertain feeling whether my meals are going to sit right, or make me miserable from the excessive acid and gas I used to have so regularly."

ACIDINE is the only known remedy which contains Japtase, that in laboratory tests digests 800 times its weight of certain heavy, starchy foods which cause trouble. It neutralizes burning acids, soothes irritated stomach linings, stops gassy headaches, sleeplessness and nervousness. No other known remedy contains this combination to end acid stomach. ACIDINE also fortifies you against colds by reducing acidity.

Get ACIDINE today at your druggist. Watch how quick acid indigestion, burning stomach, belching, pain, heartburn, dizziness, fullness, short breath, vanish. Eat, drink all you want. Maker refunds money if not delighted.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

A metropolitan tenor, whose debut was a complete failure, sings for the KDKA audience at 9:30 tonight. . . Mario Chamlee didn't have carfare to get home when San Francisco music lovers turned a deaf ear. . . he rode to his Los Angeles home on the rods of a cattle car. . .

Bob MacGimsey, the warbler, returns to radio (KDKA, 8:30) after an extensive vaudeville tour. . . he was starred with "Empire Builders" months ago. . .

Winnie Lightner makes a record. . . KDKA at 7:45. . .

NBC and CBS are in a flurry about the King of Spain. . . the network that gets him first will have something to crow about. . .

Odd thought: We wonder what those rival cigaret announcers do when they meet in the NBC corridors. . . John S. Young and "Thundering Eddie" Thorgerson . . . some of the statements they are compelled to make on the air suggest anything but amity. . .

A report that Chinese laundrymen are going on strike in Chicago has Clara, Lu 'n' Em excited . . . Clara believes the Chinese will win hands down because no one else can read their laundry checks . . .

By many wavelengths the best feminine impersonator we have heard on the air, Mae Questelle impressed us last night with her idea of Marlene Dietrich singing "In Love Again," Ruth Etting and Maurice Chevalier's "Hello Beautiful" . . . by the way, Marlene's picture appears in colors this Sunday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph . . .

When Bill Farrar, of KQV suggested broadcasting a wrestling match we merely turned up our eyebrows . . . but when he went on to say that he would hold the microphone over the huskies to catch their grunts and the funny (?) things they say,—well, go ahead, Bill!

You can imagine our enthusiasm yesterday when we saw Phil Cook registered at KDKA . . . visions of a swell picture and exclusive story . . . but on investigation we learned that this Phil lives in Whitaker, Pa. . . . and Carolyn Dickson, the hostess, informed us that there's still another local Phil Cook, a singer . . . neither related to the NBC star . . .

Frank Mulloy of WCAE sounded the trumpet lustily yesterday . . . in the mail, a letter from M. Stafford, of Pehiri Gisborne, New Zealand, stating that he listens to WCAE regularly . . . and that is 'sompin' . . . it took the letter one month to reach Pittsburgh.

So Frances Alda was the motivating influence back of the song hit, "Marcheta?" A surprise announcement in her program last night . . . she got the idea in Mexico watching a senor make love to his senorita . . .

Husk O'Hare got an awful setback recently when the boys at Duquesne U. canceled his contract for their prom in May

When the "Theater of the Air" literally comes out of the air on top of the Empire State Building on May 1, Weber and Fields are to be the featured attraction.

Nick Kenny reports that a certain New York singer was met at the studio door by his tailor 15 minutes after he had radioed "I've Got Five Dollars."

Louella Parsons, Hearst movie editor, interviews George Bancroft on WJAS next Wednesday night.

Year Closes For Events Class

Another year, its twenty-fourth, was brought to a close yesterday by the Wednesday Current Events Class when the annual luncheon was held in the Keystone Athletic Club. Covers were laid for 54 at the tastefully decorated tables and among the guests was a former president, Mrs. J. Harvey Harrison, of Cleveland.

Mrs. William Penn Baum, president, who, with all the other officers, has been re-elected, announced her committees for next year. With two exceptions they remain the same. Mrs. Lee Rodgers becomes chairman of the social committee and Mrs. A. F. B. Morris, who was in charge yesterday, takes Mrs. Rodgers' place on the executive committee.

Mrs. Baum also presented the program which Mrs. Will A. Rhodes had arranged. It was a most delightful one and was given by Helen Bell Rush with Earl Mitchell accompanying and also presenting piano solos. With two such artists giving it, needless to say the program was one of merit.

The year just closed has been decidedly worth while for the class. In addition to having enjoyed their usual fine programs, the members have done a splendid piece of philanthropic work through their newly organized magazines committee under Mrs. J. G. Klinginsmith. Hundreds of magazines were distributed to the South Side and Marine hospitals and some were sent out of town. Newspapers were collected, baled and sold for the benefit of the nurses' scholarship fund at the South Side Hospital. The class also made cash contributions to the permanent scholarship loan fund of the Congress of Clubs and to various other worthy projects.

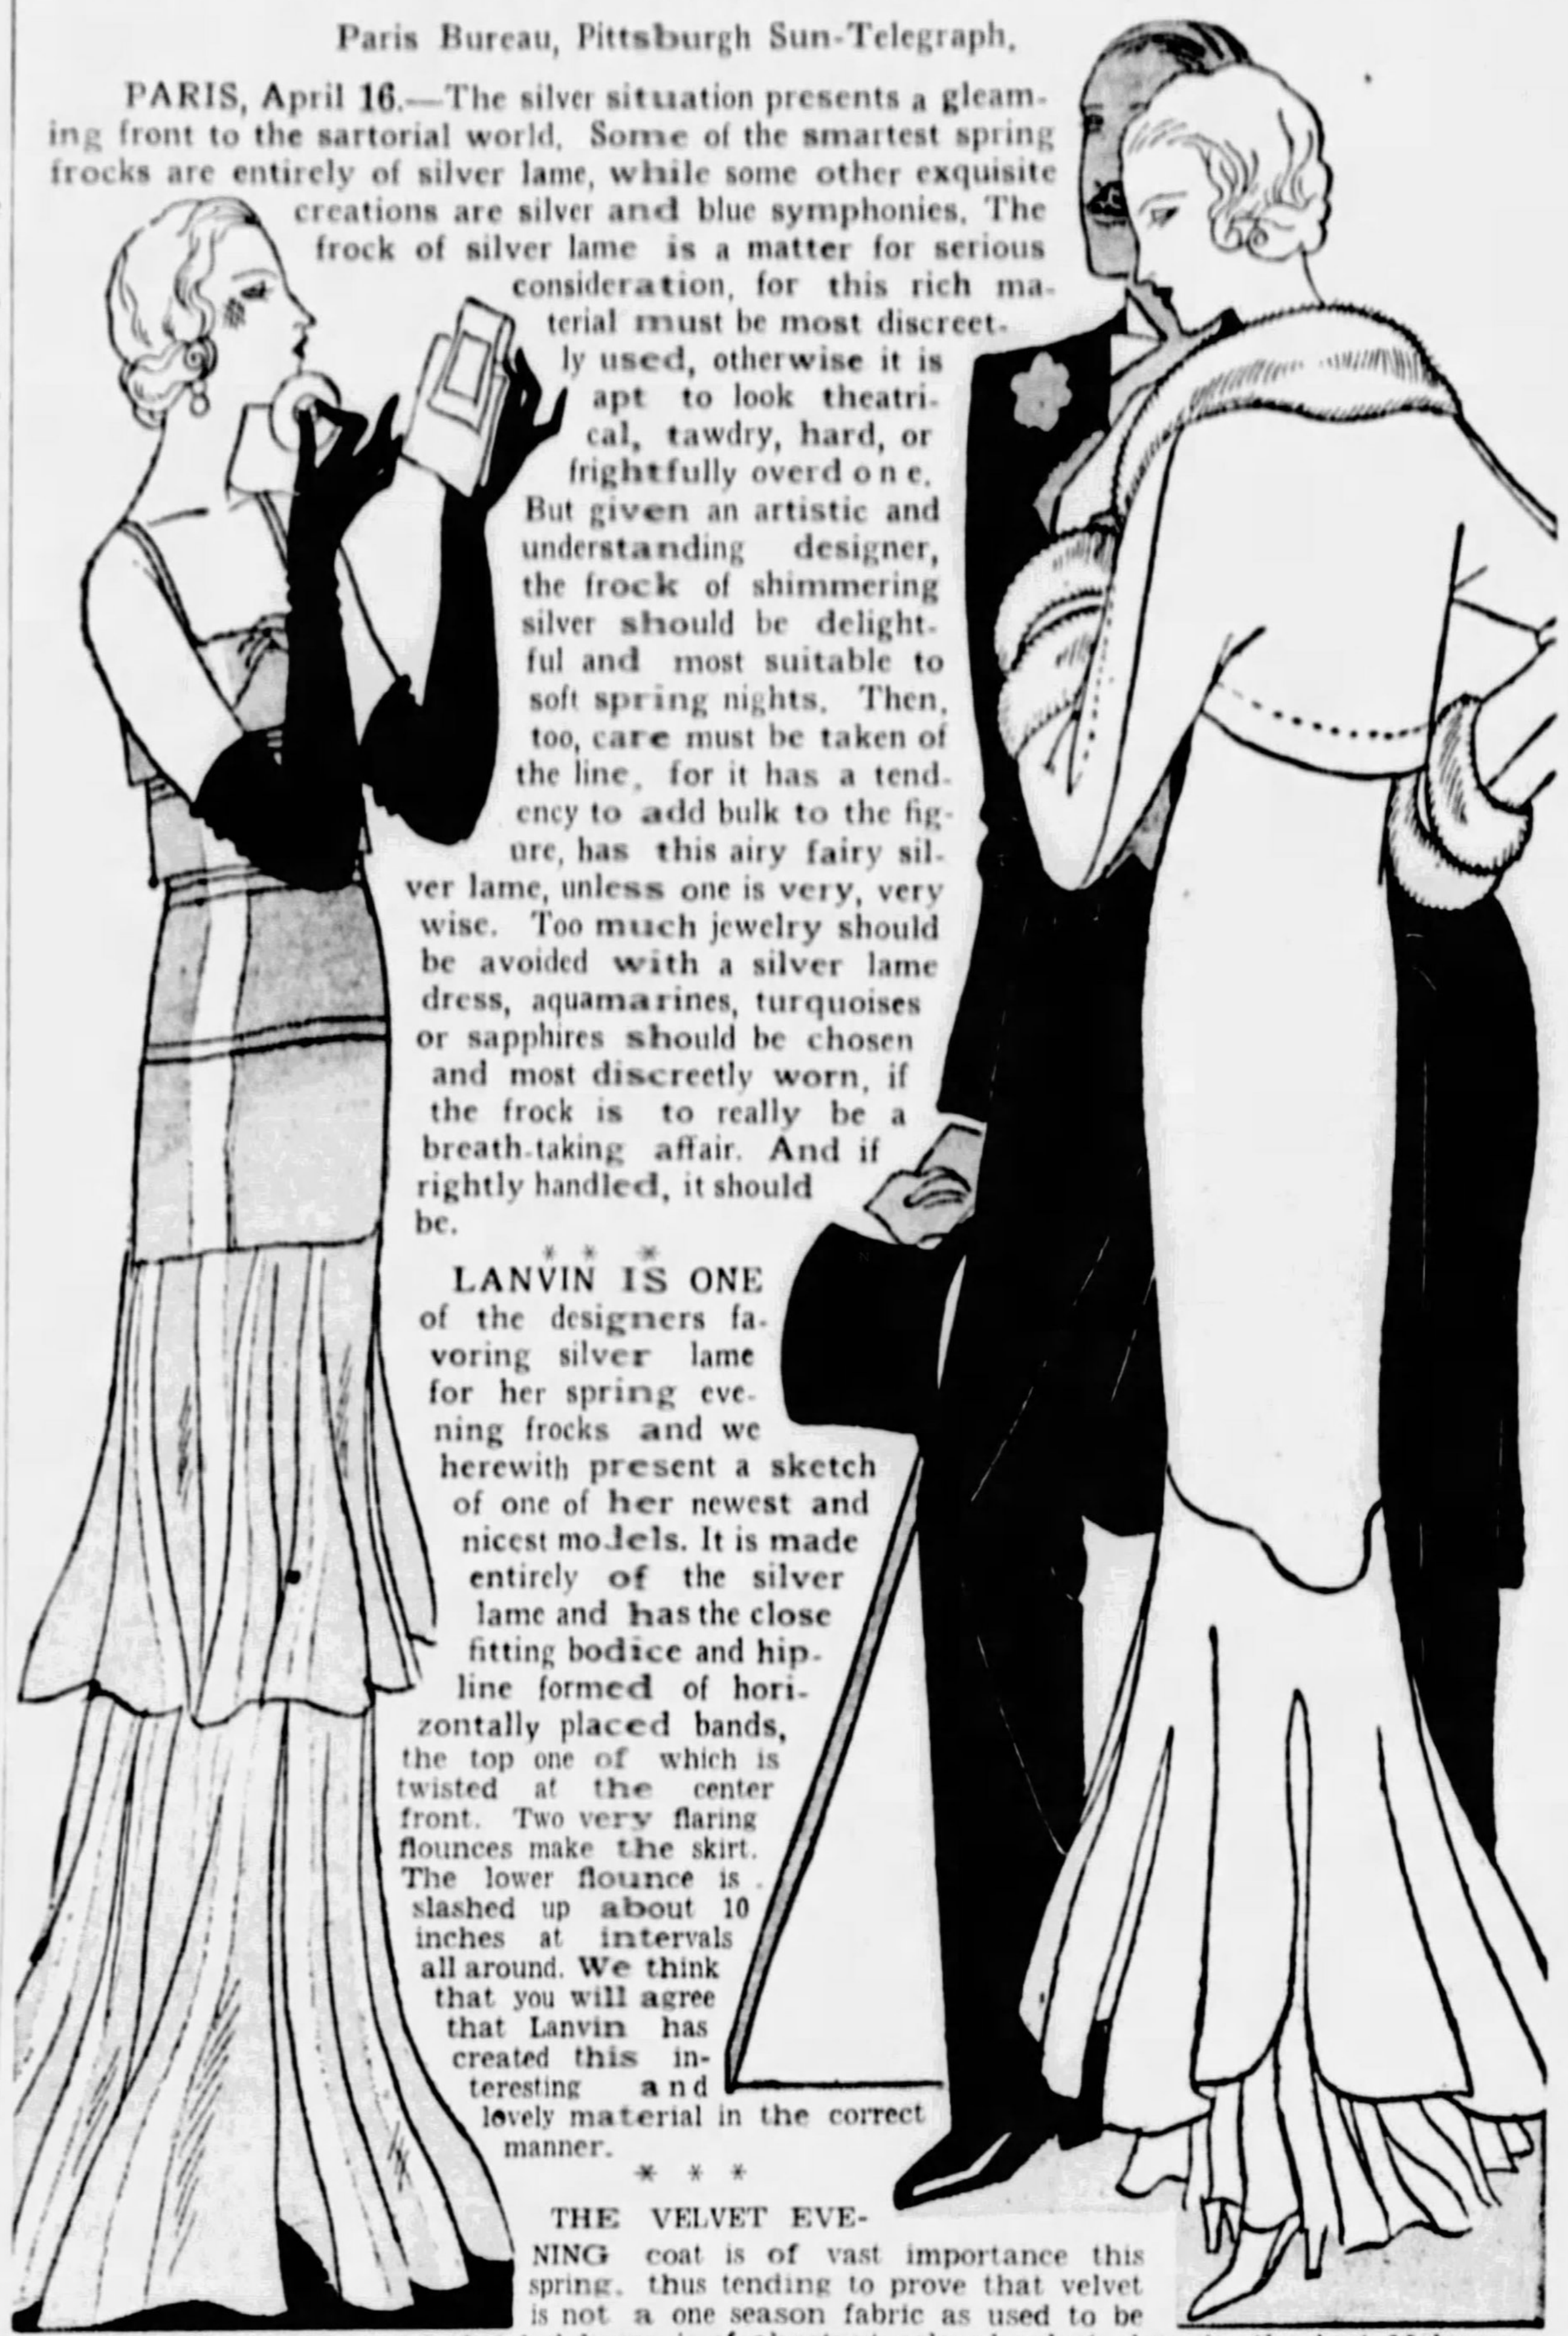
SILVER LAME FAVORED FOR SPRING EVENING FROCKS

—Sketched in Paris—



Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 16.—The silver situation presents a gleaming front to the sartorial world. Some of the smartest spring frocks are entirely of silver lame, while some other exquisite creations are silver and blue symphonies. The frock of silver lame is a matter for serious consideration, for this rich material must be most discreetly used, otherwise it is apt to look theatrical, tawdry, hard, or frightfully overdone. But given an artistic and understanding designer, the frock of shimmering silver should be delightful and most suitable to soft spring nights. Then, too, care must be taken of the line, for it has a tendency to add bulk to the figure, has this airy fairy silver lame, unless one is very, very wise. Too much jewelry should be avoided with a silver lame dress, aquamarines, turquoises or sapphires should be chosen and most discreetly worn, if the frock is to really be a breath-taking affair. And if rightly handled, it should be.

LANVIN IS ONE of the designers favoring silver lame for her spring evening frocks and we herewith present a sketch of one of her newest and nicest models. It is made entirely of the silver lame and has the close fitting bodice and hipline formed of horizontally placed bands, the top one of which is twisted at the center front. Two very flaring flounces make the skirt. The lower flounce is slashed up about 10 inches at intervals all around. We think that you will agree that Lanvin has created this interesting and lovely material in the correct manner.

THE VELVET EVENING coat is of vast importance this spring, thus tending to prove that velvet is not a one season fabric as used to be thought. The lovely model sketched here is of chestnut colored velvet, done in the best Molyneux manner. A deep tuck across the back of the coat suggests a bolero. On each sleeve, running from shoulder to shoulder, is a similar deep tuck. A single marten skin makes the narrow collar and two skins on each sleeve form the cuff. Placed rather low on the coat is a circular flounce cut in flaring petal-shaped sections. This coat gracefully accompanies a biscuit chiffon frock.

SKINNY MEN

Gain pounds of weight in few weeks with new IRONIZED YEAST—a special combination of dried brewer's yeast plus iron—or pay nothing

Daily the letters pour in telling how new Ironized Yeast has added pounds of good solid flesh in few weeks. Has built up new strength and pep in nervous, tired people. Has banished constipation, indigestion. Has cleared skin.

Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one—special weight-building dried brewer's Yeast and blood-enriching, strengthening Iron. The yeast is the same as used in making malt and which makes malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured and concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value. Double-tested for strength, purity and potency. Used by doctors and big hospitals.

To this concentrated dried brewer's Yeast is added three kinds of easily assimilated Iron to quickly make rich, red blood and tone up nerves and muscles. By this special process Ironized Yeast is made more effective than yeast or iron taken separately. Contains no starches, flours or gas-forming fillers. Pleasant little tablets—no nasty taste, no gas or bloating. Never spoil, safe for everybody.

Don't have a "skinny," weak body. Go to your druggist today and get a full size treatment of Ironized Yeast. Take as directed, and if you are not delighted with quick results, your money promptly refunded by manufacturer.

Europe Has Rackets Too

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

English are afraid the dollar of the American tourist is capturing their West Indies. It isn't a bad way to get caught.

The tourist dollar will surround anything with a beautiful halo of service. But when you haven't got that dollar you aren't a tourist. You're a bum.

We admit we spend a lot of gravy around the world. Europe acts on the theory that every traveling American is a millionaire. And he is. While he is traveling.

But when he gets back home and starts to count up, he is as empty as a raided night club. All he has to show for his trip are a set of Paris postcards. And he can't show them.

Come to think it over, it isn't the money we have spent for meals, tips, tickets and knickknacks that flatten the star-spangled bankroll.

It wouldn't be so bad if Europe were content to extract the tourist plunder legitimately. But it thinks up a lot of ways to speed up the golden unloading.

It starts right in Bermuda. A man tells you to throw dollars overboard and see the boys dive after them. He doesn't tell you the boys are his nephews. You toss 'em over and the boys dive as advertised.

Six months later you are back at the same spot diving for one yourself.

We will eliminate the beggars of Spain and Italy, as that is local color. But is there any reason why an American should drop dimes into a Norwegian wishing well for a wish in a language he cannot speak or understand?

Yet, every morning at dawn, a man backs a wagon up to a Norwegian wishing well and shovels out a ton of tourist dimes. The tourists don't wish half so heartily as he does. And his wish comes true.

He's wishing you to throw in dimes. There is a fountain in Rome into which you toss a quarter. If you do this your guide gurantees that you will always come back to Rome.

You may or you may not. If you do, we guarantee that your quarter won't be there.

It's a pretty good racket. And we are wasting opportunities when you figure what a beautiful wishing well we could make out of the Grand Canyon.

This new technique quickly makes TEETH WHITER

as it removes Bacterial-Mouth

Mon.
Tues.
Wed.

WHEN your smile reveals teeth stained to an ugly yellow, cloudy, marred by decay and denuded at their necks by receding gums others know that you have Bacterial-Mouth. An inexcusable condition caused by germs that sweep into the mouth with every breath and attack teeth and gums. Kolynos whitens teeth so quickly and firms gums so effectively because it kills the germs that are the source of this trouble.

Use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique for 3 days—a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush, morning and night. Then look at your teeth—fully 3 shades whiter.

In 10 days the improvement will be so marked you will never again say that white teeth are a gift received only by a fortunate few.

Dentists advocate the Dry-Brush Technique as the one way to use a dentifrice full strength and keep brush bristles stiff enough to clean every tooth surface and massage gums properly. Kolynos permits this technique.

This highly concentrated, double-strength dental cream is unique in action. It multiplies 25 times when it enters the mouth—thus a half-inch of Kolynos is equal in effectiveness to 12 inches of the ordinary toothpaste. It becomes a surging, antiseptic FOAM that makes wetting the toothbrush unnecessary.

You can feel Kolynos work. It foams into every pit, fissure and crevice.

Germs that cause Bacterial-Mouth and lead to stain, decay and gum diseases are killed. They vanish and the entire mouth is purified. Kolynos kills 190 million germs in 15 seconds, 424 million in 60 seconds.

This amazing Kolynos FOAM removes food particles that ferment and cause decay . . . neutralizes acids . . . washes away tartar and the unsightly mucoid coating that clouds teeth.

Easily and quickly, it cleans and polishes teeth down to the naked, white enamel—without injury. And for 3 hours after each brushing this cleansing, purifying process continues.

So long as you use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique teeth will remain gleaming white and sound, gums will be firm and healthy.

Look for Results in 3 Days

If you want whiter, sounder teeth and firm, pink gums start using Kolynos—a half-inch on a dry brush, morning and night. Within 3 days teeth will look whiter—fully 3 shades. Gums will look and feel better. Your mouth will tingle with a clean, sweet taste. Try a tube of Kolynos.

Good news for all the world

the new low price

OF THE CHAMPAGNE OF GINGER ALES

When Canada Dry first came down from Canada, it became—almost overnight—the most talked-about beverage in the world.

And last week, history repeated itself. In the locker rooms of country clubs, over bridge tables in the afternoon, as friends met during the day, there was one subject of conversation which was good news to every one—"I see Canada Dry has reduced its price."

More value than ever

At its new low price the value of Canada Dry is outstanding—convincingly so. Its wonderful flavor, its gay sparkle, its distinctive charm have made it the preferred ginger ale all over the world. Yet in spite of its superior quality, Canada Dry is now priced well within the range of all other ginger ales.

3 to 5 cents lower

As in the past, the new low price of Canada Dry will vary. Sometimes, particularly at night, or when it is iced or delivered, it may be slightly more because of the extra service. But in all cases, you will find that a bottle of Canada Dry is now 3 to 5 cents cheaper than before.

Take advantage of this low price and have The Champagne of Ginger Ales always on hand for your parties and for the family's enjoyment. You'll find it very convenient to buy the handy Hostess Package.

Real Estate

J. Sherman Campbell, president of the Keystone Adjustment Corporation, will be the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board to be held Tuesday in the Blue Room of the William Penn Hotel. His subject will be "Fire Insurance—The Vitamin of Business."

James P. Donovan, downtown realtor, has been appointed renting agent for the Stevenson-Foster Building, Seventh avenue and William Penn way.

Ground has been broken for the new Verona Heights Public School, Penn Township. The building is expected to be completed by September 1, according to Frank R. Smith, director of the school board. It will be a two-story brick building containing eight rooms and a combination gymnasium and auditorium. The approximate cost is set at $65,000.

New income tax laws or amendments to existing income tax laws are progressing favorably in 14 states, reports the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The association pointed out a few weeks ago that many state legislatures were to consider new sources of revenues in the present sessions and said that this was a hopeful sign for owners of real property who would be relieved of some of the tax burden if proposed income taxes were enacted. Three states have enacted new income tax laws, and new income tax laws or amendments favorable to realty have passed both the House and Senate in six other states, according to the association.

The first of a series of three historical piano recitals by Lily Thorrington, British pianist, attracted a small but interested audience in Hotel Schenley yesterday afternoon. This first program was devoted entirely to early keyboard music, some of it written originally for harpsichord and virginal, the rest from Haydn, Mozart and the young Beethoven.

Miss Thorrington has a pleasant English voice and although giving much bookish information, she tells her story of music in a simple, direct way and knows her music well so that she chooses excellent examples to illustrate her lecture.

This afternoon the program will comprise romantic music, and tomorrow the moderns will make up the concert.

Woman Urges Party Heads Get Salaries

NEW YORK, April 16.—(AP.)—Miss Annie Mathews, former register of New York County and Tammany co-leader in the Nineteenth Assembly District, recommended in an address last night that political parties be organized as businesses and the leaders paid salaries. She spoke before the League of Women Voters of New York.

Leaders, she said, are responsible for party victory and, even though they draw no salaries, "must live like everybody else."

WOMAN GIVES $20,000 TO JOB FUND

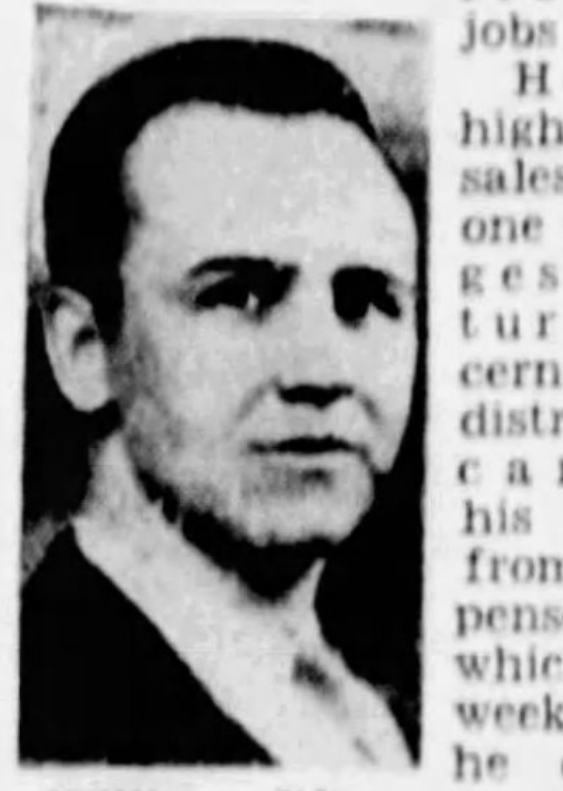
State Plans Labor Stabilization

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

A true story which should appeal to those who, at some time or another, have been fired from their jobs:



William Pfarr

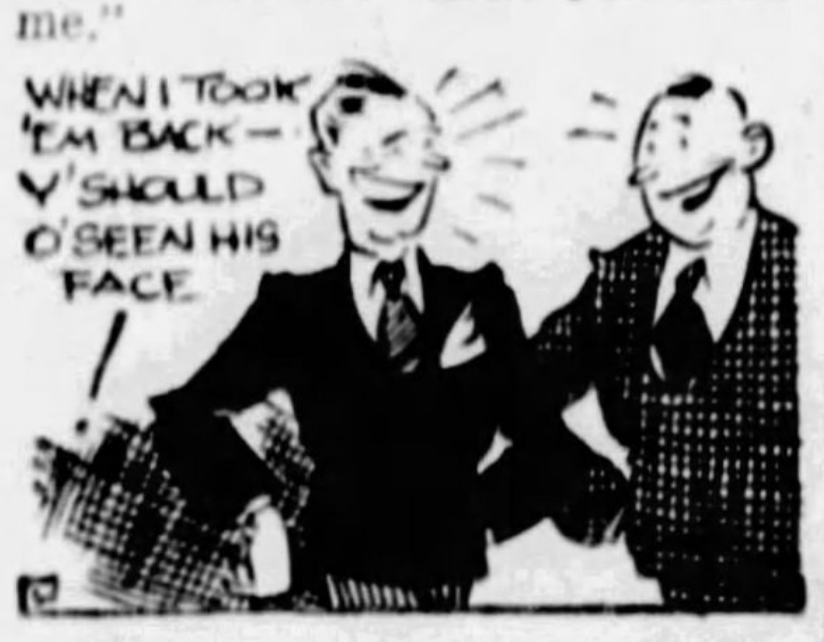
He was a high-powered salesman for one of the biggest maufacturing concerns in this district. You can estimate his income from his expense account, which, for one week in which he did much running about, was $25,000. Cigars alone were $300.

The company paid the expense account without a murmur but decided that the sales force had to be cut down. They let him go.

A week or so later he dropped into the boss' office and tossed on his desk orders amounting to $1,500,000.

"Well," the boss chuckled, "we certainly appreciate this. It's good of you, old man."

"Not so good," the salesman retorted, reclaiming the order slips. "These are for the firm that hired me when you fired me."



WHEN I TOOK 'EM BACK—Y'SHOULD O'SEEN HIS FACE

Excerpts from the scrapbook of the late Charles M. Bregg, the most famed drama critic in the city's history: The 1909-1910 season—"Little Nemo," a musical comedy based on that comic strip, furnished "rich comedy" at the Nixon . . . Maclyn Arbuckle came to town in "The Circus Man" . . . William Hodge, barely known then, played the Alvin in the play that made him famous, "The Man From Home" . . . Mr. Bregg complained of the lack of adjectives to describe William Faversham's performance in "Herod" . . . and Blanche Bates did a creditable piece of acting in "The Fighting Hope" . . . The second act of Margaret Anglin's "Green Stockings" was good but the first and third acts were not so good . . . Sothern and Marlowe return in "The Taming of the Shrew" . . . And "Madame X," that dependable old meller, had "young Ralph Morgan" in the cast, to say nothing of an even then rotund Otis Skinner . . . The stock company moved from the Duquesne to the Grand to play "At the White Horse Tavern" . . . And, the next week, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" . . . Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," presented by the Junior League of Pittsburgh, was at the Alvin for two weeks (February, 1912) . . . And Josephine Victor, here with Maude Adams in "Chantecler," was the same Josephine Victor Reid who wrote that much-panned flop, "With the Tide," which died at the Nixon a few months ago . . . Lillian Russell, playing here with Weber and Fields in "A Jubilee," had just been married. . . And Florence Fisher (Parry) "acquitted herself with rare skill" in Walker Whiteside's "The Typhoon" (September, 1912) . . .

To hear Frank Butler tell it, the whole town is on its ear awaiting news about the Cap and Gown show. A professional analyzer of things in general, Butler pictures all the pretty little girls on the Pitt campus running about in sighs and making eyes at the men who wear female costumes in the show. It seems that years ago the co-eds and the populace in general ridiculed the costumes the boys wore. When, for example, Dr. John Ashbrook and his thespian colleagues presented "In Wupland" in 1908, the fluffy-sleeved dresses and the rats which formed their pompadour wigs were stolen from their sisters, if not their sweethearts.

Now all is different. The actors wear the latest in gowns and the girls are jealous. It is Butler's contention that no Cap-and-Gowner has trouble filling his book of engagements after the Cap and Gown troupe disbands because all the pretty little girls have designs on his costume.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

PANAMA CITY, April 16.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

King of Spain, the poor fellow! I feel kinder sorry for him. I met him while in Spain and he seemed just about the most "regular guy" you would want to talk to, and everybody has had to admire his personal nerve. You know us up home, we just can't understand this Latin politics. The only time they ever get to cheer is when one side overthrows the other, then they got to cheer mighty fast. What they need in all these Latin countries is a party that compares with our Democrats, one that loses and don't do nothing about it but talk.

BILL PROVIDES NEW BUREAU IN CITY

Secretary Explains Plan Designed to End Evils of Sporadic Unemployment

The establishment of two permanent state employment bureaus to stabilize employment—one in Pittsburgh and the other in Philadelphia—is proposed in legislation which is to be presented to Gov. Gifford Pinchot, Monday, Dr. A. M. Northrup, state secretary of labor and industry, said here today.

Dr. Northrup, who will address the eighth annual Safety Engineers' Conference in Pittsburgh in the Chamber of Commerce, said that the proposed legislation had been drafted by Dr. Clyde King and Joseph Willets, of Harrisburg. Following Monday's conference, if Gov. Pinchot approves, the bill will be presented to the Legislature.

JOB STABILAZATION

The idea of the state employment bureaus is to illustrate how employment bureaus, functioning properly, may stabilize employment. It requires $150,000 to finance the scheme, and the bill proposes three ways in which the money can be obtained: $50,000 from one of the state foundation funds; $50,000 from standing committees in the two cities involved, and a state appropriation of $50,000.

The bureaus will work in cooperation with employers of labor and their personnel to maintain a steady flow of labor at all times, Dr. Northrup said.

Dr. Northrup indorsed the Pittsburgh plan for stabilization of employment.

TAXI DISPUTE AIRED

The labor secretary predicted an amicable adjustment of difficulties which threaten another taxicab strike in Pittsburgh. Mediators from the department, he said, have returned to Harrisburg with the assurance of a satisfactory adjustment of the existing difficulties between drivers and the Parmalee company.

Dr. Northrup also made known that the governors of 10 states had been invited to send delegations to Harrisburg for a conference the latter part of June to consider the standardization of labor laws. Workmen's compensation laws should be uniform, Dr. Northrup said, adding that this problem and other similar matters will be discussed at the proposed conference.

British Shipping Speeded by Foch to Bring U. S. Troops

In yesterday's instalment Marshal Foch told how, toward the close of the spring of 1918, France and England were finding great difficulty in obtaining the men necessary to make good the losses in their armies on the Western Front. He emphasized the great drains on their forces because of the heavy German drives and drew a vivid picture of the urgent need for IMMEDIATE HELP in man power from America. He also recorded the historic victory of troops of the American 1st Division in capturing Cantigny from the Germans, which demonstrated the efficacy of the American soldier in battle and kindled new enthusiasm among the Allied forces. Today he tells of his plans for the employment of American troops for meeting new German drives on the Western Front.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

CHAPTER XIX.

During the middle of April, 1918, at a time when the crisis in both French and British effectives was particularly acute, the American Army in France comprised only five fighting divisions. One of these, the 1st, was about to join the 1st French Army, three others (2nd, 26th and 42nd) were holding quiet sectors of the front, and the remaining one (32nd) had temporarily distributed its infantry among French divisions to complete its training.

This infantry constituted, therefore, the sole direct help which the American Army was furnishing to fill the gaps in the French Army. Counting the black troops which were serving with our divisions, the total amounted to 23,000 infantrymen, which, as can be seen, was far from meeting such pressing needs as ours.

During the month of April the infantry of two other American divisions (3d and 5th) was due to arrive in France, but these troops could not be incorporated in French units within less than from three to five weeks. In what concerns the British Army, the help afforded by America was limited, for the moment, to the infantry of one division (77th), then on the ocean.

We thus see that to replace their very heavy losses in infantry, the French and British armies could not count on the immediate or early help of more than 70,000 American infantry.

The evident feebleness of this result demanded that the mistakes which up to the present had been made in the matter of transporting the American Army to France be corrected. What was needed above all was that during several months the United States should send the Allies only infantry, to the exclusion of all other arms.

By this means only could the British and French armies procure the 300,000 to 350,000 infantry which were needed to get through their existing crisis in effectives.

In a detailed memorandum to the French Prime Minister I presented these views and asked him to appeal to the American Government to put them into effect.

That government, in fact, was already informed and seemed disposed to accept the proposition of the commander-in-chief of the Allied Armies. It remained to convince Gen. Pershing, who was full of the idea of commanding a

WHARF CONTROL SHIFT URGED IN COUNCIL

Lang Proposed as New Parking Chief; Revenue Gain Told at Hearing

City Council yesterday took to first steps towards transferring the management of the wharf parking stations from the Department of Public Safety to the Department of Public Works.

A motion was passed instructing Public Works Director Edward G. Lang to make a survey of the parking activities and determine how much money and how large an organization will be required to handle the wharves in his department.

This move came after James W. Bamford, active in the Building Owners' and Managers' Association, presented a tabulation showing the daily receipts from the wharves for three months.

INCOME DOUBLED

The revenues have more than doubled since the first protest was made by the building owners, Bamford declared. He denied the reason was the spring weather, and said he had comparative figures from last year to prove it.

A proposal to put a large number of men to work improving the wharves was made by Harry I. Miller. Bamford declared the question of management should be settled before spending any more money on the wharves.

A group from the Better Traffic Committee presented a plan of increasing the parking capacity of the wharves by 2,000 cars through the expenditure of $100,000 for materials and the use of labor of men now unemployed. The traffic group included Frank L. Duggan, Walter Rosenbaum, F. J. Kress and City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre.

STUDY PLANNED

The proposition was turned over to the Department of Public Works for study.

A decision from the law department was read indicating the leasing of the wharves to private parties would be illegal. Rosenbaum spoke on the value of the city retaining the wharves and providing adequate off-street parking space.

SAVED BY SWIM UNDER FIRE

The ability of John McNamara, 16, of 906 Arlington avenue, to swim under water probably saved his life last night when the force of an explosion hurled him from a barge into the Monongahela River, when the water was covered with a coating of burning gasoline. McNamara swam under water until he had got beyond the flame-covered area. The accident occurred at the foot of South First street, South Side.

McNamara and three of his friends, John Murray, Joseph Manco and Walter Bobac, all of Brownsville avenue, last night visited James Clark, who lives on a houseboat. McNamara sat on an adjoining barge smoking a cigaret. The explosion occurred when he tossed the butt of the cigaret into the river.

McNamara was hurled into the water. As he came up a sheet of flame swept toward him and he ducked below the surface and swam for the bank. The flames ignited the houseboat.

$3,000,000 CAMPAIGN NEAR END

More Than Million Now Pledged, With $43,506 Reported at Luncheon

A check for $20,000 from an unnamed Pittsburgh woman gave impetus to the Allegheny County Emergency Association campaign for $3,000,000 to support the Pittsburgh plan. The gift, reported at a luncheon for workers at noon, increased the daily report to $43,506.49. The total pledged is $1,048,716.51.

Subscriptions totaling $10,656.44 were reported yesterday by solicitors at a luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce. Of this amount, Division "B," the Chamber unit, under the chairmanship of T. P. Gaylord, was credited with $6,521.98; Division "A," soliciting individuals, under the direction of Walter C. Carroll, reported $4,134.46. Of the units of the larger divisions, the team of which H. T. Burnett is captain turned in the highest amount with 56 subscriptions calling for $836.50.

Arthur E. Braun, executive chairman of the association, was the principal speaker at yesterday's luncheon. He said the association, in line with its work of employment stabilization, would make a study of a long range plan by which future emergencies might be averted.

Edgar J. Kaufmann, one of the originators of the Pittsburgh Plan, will discuss it before the Men's Club of B'nai Israel Synagogue, 327 North Negley avenue, Monday night. He will answer questions at an open forum following the lecture.

6 BOY BANDITS SENTENCED

Most spectacular of the hold-ups was that of the Negley garage, 556 South Negley avenue, during which the gun and flashlight of Patrolman Thomas Phillips were taken from him when he surprised them at their work.

Three of the gang admitted part in this hold-up.

The six youths and their terms are: William Beatty, 12 to 24 years; Joseph DeSavage, 15 to 60 years; John McMeekin, 15 to 60 years; Paul Gudenburr, 23, 6838 Frankstown avenue, 15 to 60 years; Edward Mapier, 21, 2217 Mulberry way, 12 to 60 years; Edward Kulakowski, 18, Mulberry way, 10 to 60 years.

FOUR FIREMEN RESCUED IN BURNING HOME IN AVALON

DAYLIGHT TIME NOTICE GIVEN BY KLINE

City to Observe Custom Starting Sunday, April 26; Period to End Sept. 27

A proclamation to all residents of Pittsburgh, requesting them to adjust their affairs to conform with daylight saving time, was issued by Mayor Charles H. Kline today, through his secretary, Frank Swancy.

Daylight saving time starts Sunday, April 26, and ends Sunday, September 27.

The proclamation reads:

"As a result of 13 years' continuous experience, the people of Pittsburgh have established the custom of observing daylight saving time in the activities of this community.

"The custom is dictated partly by the necessity of adjusting the inter-change of business between this and other large cities, and partly to give opportunity to all classes of people for evening recreation. The wisdom of the practice thus having been demonstrated, it is apparent that it should be continued and I, therefore, recommend that all persons adapt themselves, their business and their affairs thereto, for the period from Sunday, April 26, to September 27.

"The office hours and the daily employment of city officers and employes will conform thereto."

Swaney announced he had received word from the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association that a resolution had been adopted in favor of the advanced time.

SMOKE TRAPS MEN ON UPPER FLOOR

Owner and Family Escape In Scanty Attire; Damage To Home Set at $20,000

Overcome by smoke when trapped on the second floor as fire destroyed the home of Fred J. Frenz, 826 Taylor avenue, Avalon, early today, four firemen were carried to safety by comrades.

Frenz, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Platt, and their daughter, Mary Louise, 15 months, and Miss Thelma Frenz, in night attire, fled through a front door.

Frenz, a heating contractor, had offices in the structure.

The four firemen overcome by the smoke were A. B. Craig, Jonn Speer, C. M. Marx and E. Beck. Carried out by fellow-firemen, they were given first aid and removed to their homes.

Starting in the basement and spreading quickly throughout the three-story stucco dwelling, flames completely destroyed the residence. Loss was estimated at $20,000 by Assistant Fire Chief J. A. Crick.

Fireman Craig, who lives across the street from the Frenz home, was awakened when he heard the screams of one of Frenz's daughters. Unable to gain entrance to the burning building, he was forced to break down a basement door, and led the occupants to safety. The telephone lines already had been burned.

According to police, the fire started in the cellar, when, it is believed, a board fell on the water heater, turning the valve on full force. The fire reached the top floor through the clothes chute. The home was valued at $16,000 and the belongings valued at $4,000.

Firemen turned to saving the adjoining property when they knew they were unable to save the Frenz home.

Bookkeeper Found Guilty in Extortion

James H. Evans, 24, Tarentum bookkeeper, was found guilty of extortion by a jury which considered his case for 18 hours. On November 19, last, he sent a letter to Mrs. O. M. Otte, wife of the chief engineer of the Allegheny Steel Company, demanding $1,000. The money was to be thrown from a train between Pittsburgh and Tarentum.

DRESS EXPERT MEETS CO-EDS

Pitt co-eds yesterday were told how to dress correctly on a limited budget. Miss Grace Ely, art consultant of the retail training bureau of the University of Pittsburgh, just returned from Paris, demonstrated at Heinz House yesterday the economy of careful selection in the summer wardrobe.

Accessories should be chosen, she said, with the view of harmony of contrast or accent rather than to match the costume. Contrast is the keynote of the modern mode. The trend in fabrics is toward materials of a knitted, spongey, angora or crushable nature which do not wrinkle. Miss Ely said:

"The well-dressed woman is not always the woman who spends the most money on her wardrobe. Careful planning and selection are essential."

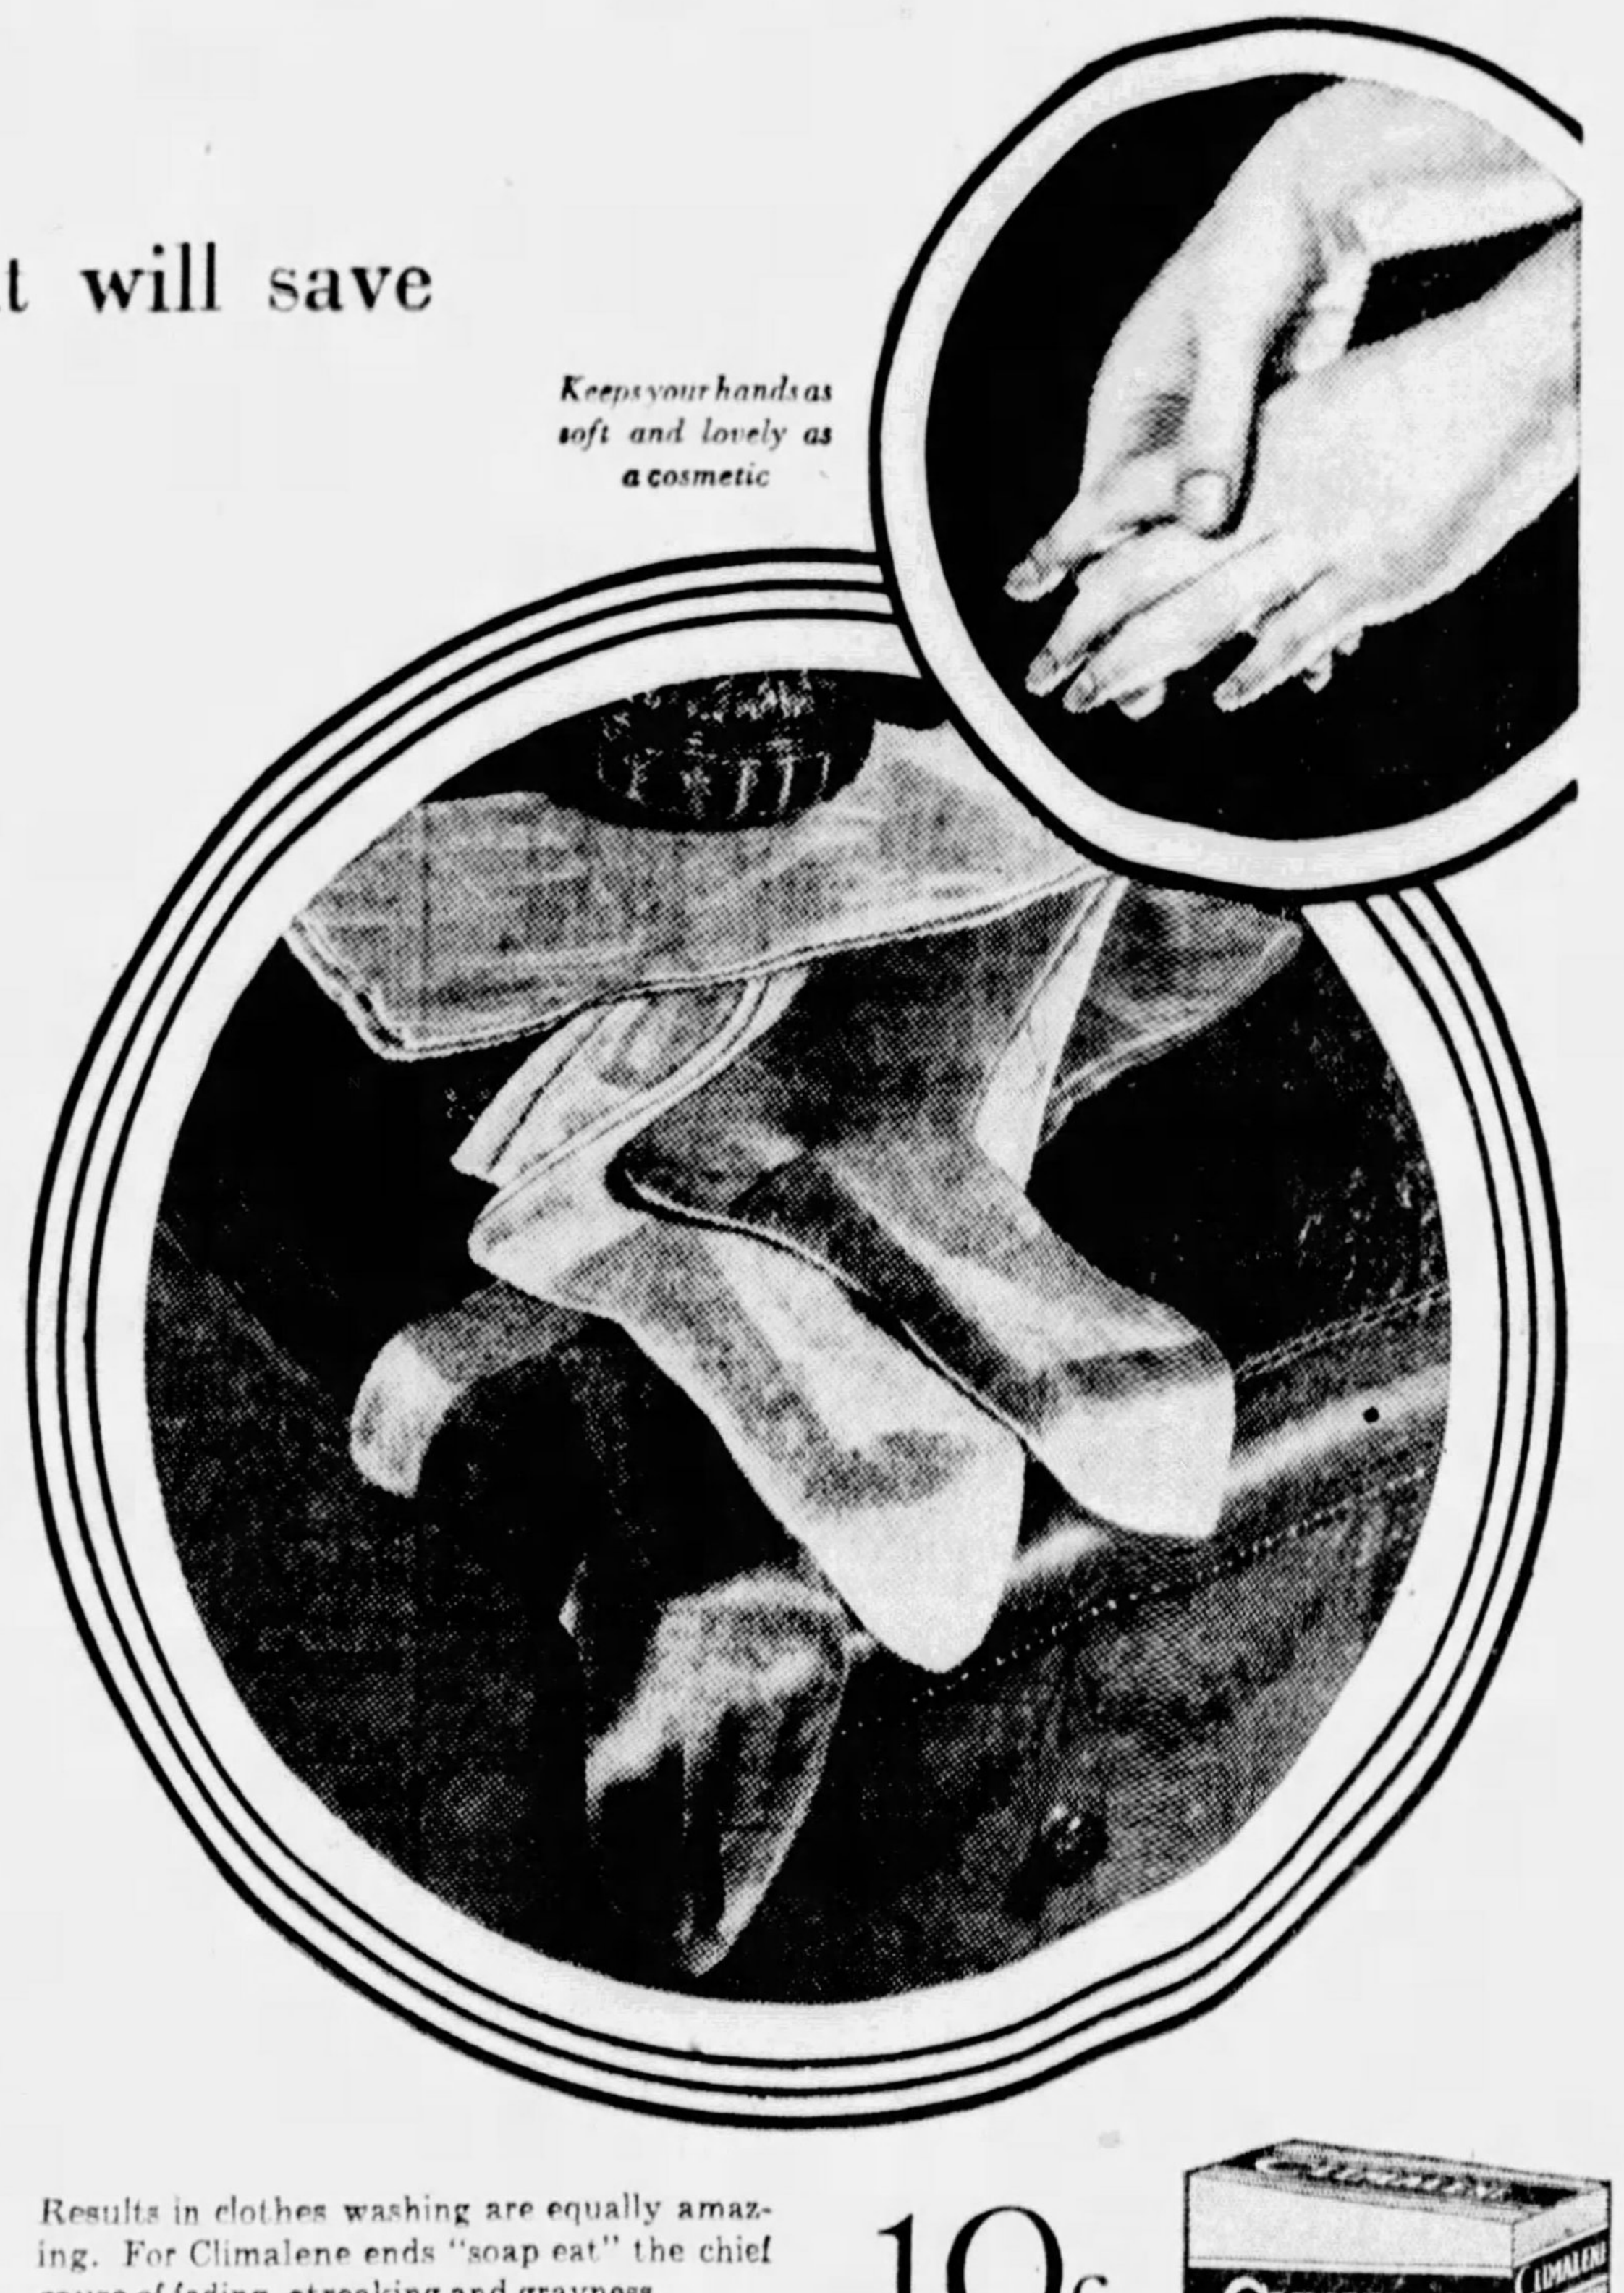
Now..Keep Hosiery from Fading When You Wash It

A discovery that will save you many dollars

We Washed These Pairs 61 Times Without Fade!



NEW light has been thrown on saving fine hosiery and dainty fabrics from ruin and fade that often saves a family hundreds of dollars yearly; and the housewife countless heartaches.

A way has been found that makes the worst "hard" water and ordinary household soap into a perfect NO-FADE cleanser.

Fine lingerie is washed 50 times or more—without noticeable fade.

Expensive hosiery 60 to 100 times without fade.

What It Is

It is a preparation called Climalene that you add to your washing water. Just a teaspoon or two.

Instantly, it takes all the harshness out of that water. Makes it soft as rain water. So soft that it does the work with ONE-FOURTH the soap you use now. And thus ends danger of "soap eat" to fragile things.

At the same time, due to certain bland cleansing agents, it instantly DISSOLVES all dirt, stains and grime. And thus cuts washing time —ONE-HALF or more.

Use the soap or soap flakes you ordinarily do. Then see for yourself how amazingly they then act. Some 2 million women now are using Climalene—for washing, for cleaning and in the dishpan.

Results in clothes washing are equally amazing. For Climalene ends "soap eat" the chief cause of fading, streaking and grayness.

Laboratory Proved

We wash delicate lingerie, often 50 times—without perceptible fade. Children's rompers, 60 to 90 times. That's over a year's home washing.

We wash gold encrusted china hundreds of times—without a trace of gold gone. And thus prove the blandness of this way.

Consider, please, what those things mean to you. Consider, too, that the minute you put this creation into water, all harshness is taken away—your hands protected from roughness, made soft, smooth and white. Then try it.

Your grocer has it in 10c and 25c packages. Note the name—CLIMALENE. 189

NATIONAL HEAD OF AUXILIARY SPEAKS HERE

Former Soldiers Pay Bills, Restore Self-Respect; Hits Peace Propaganda

The adjusted compensation certificates have proved a real help to World War veterans, Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, of Douglas, Ariz., national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, in Pittsburgh as honor guest of Allegheny County Council of the auxiliary, said today.

PROVE REAL AID

She said:

"I think the certificates have helped solve the economic problem of the veterans. Our reports show that they are using the money to pay their bills, buy clothing and food and are keeping their self-respect which was in danger as long as some of them were dependent upon charity. The majority are using their money wisely."

The national president attacked the peace propaganda "being spread by certain womens' organizations." She said that while the auxiliary believes in treaties and friendly gestures, they feel that the only sure way of preserving peace is to have a national defense system which will command respect from other nations.

MUST BE SENSIBLE

She concluded:

"We must be sensible instead of sentimental about world peace."

Mrs. Hoyal, Mrs. Thomas Meany, Jr., of Philadelphia, state president, Mrs. Albert Jennings, Allegheny County president, and members visited the United States Veteran Hospital at Aspinwall. They attended a luncheon in William Penn Hotel, preceding the hospital inspection.

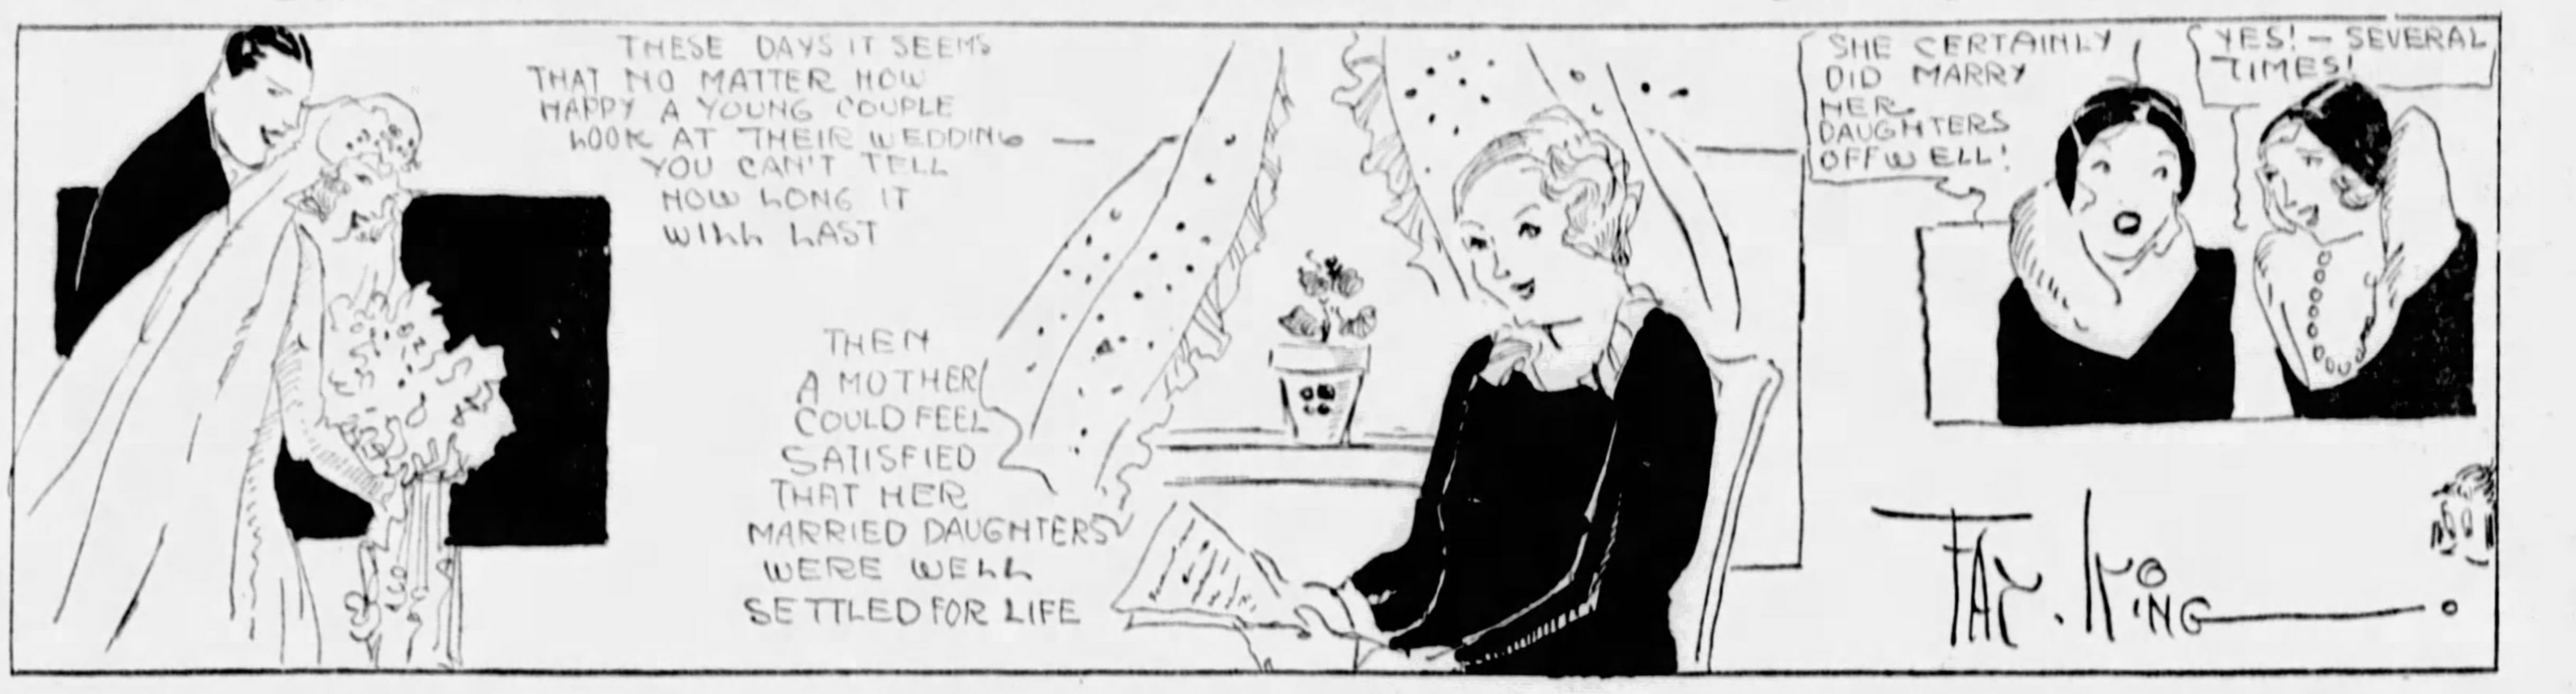
Divorce Is an Ever Present Problem to Parents These Days, Says Fay King



THESE DAYS IT SEEMS THAT NO MATTER HOW HAPPY A YOUNG COUPLE LOOK AT THEIR WEDDING — YOU CAN'T TELL HOW LONG IT WILL LAST
THEN A MOTHER COULD FEEL SATISFIED THAT HER MARRIED DAUGHTERS WERE WELL SETTLED FOR LIFE
SHE CERTAINLY DID MARRY HER DAUGHTERS OFF WELL!
YES! — SEVERAL TIMES!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

In the good old days, when marriages were expected to last a lifetime, mothers could sit back contentedly and feel that their married daughters were well settled in life.

But in these days of easy divorce a mother attends her daughter's beautiful wedding and wonders how long it will last.

Hardly have her friends congratulated her upon the excellent match her daughter made when daughter comes prancing back to the old homestead.

Matchmaking mothers merit no praise in these hectic days unless they manage to marry off their divorced daughters speedily and splendidly.

Divorce is an ever present problem to parents these days.

Marrying a daughter off is no longer a settled matter to feel satisfied over.

She'll probably be back!

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Don't Be a Nagger When Hubby Makes Mistake

What'll she do to "make her husband come to his senses"—?

She's nagged him—scolded him—told him what a sap he is—

But, strangely, all he does is get a man-sized peeve on, and tell her that if she "doesn't like it she can pick up and get out!"

"And that, after I've worked and help him for 23 years!" she wails, with big gulps of self-pity.

Is it "The Other Woman" that's causing all this ruckus? Wrong guess, not this time. Then what is it? Money! That's the bone of contention.

Gambled Money Away

"Dear Miss Martin—

"I wonder if you can help me? You help so many people that I'm in hopes you can, so I am bringing my problem to you. I am 43 years old, and have been married for 23 years. We have two very fine daughters, 21 and 22 years of age, and a nice home . . . but, Sally, I'm the most unhappy woman living!

"Until about two years ago my husband and I got along marvelously. But there has been such a radical change in him lately that I don't know what to do. He has got so he seems to think he's the 'whole show' and that he is being mistreated and abused, and Lord knows what all. He makes the meanest and most biting remarks to me, right in front of everybody, and just simply doesn't seem to care what anyone thinks of either me or him.

"He has never had any bad habits, so you can imagine my surprise, when I found out that just recently he gambled away over $600. He drew it from his insurance policy in order that I should know nothing about it, and thought he could make some money that way.

"His real estate business has been very slack, and so he thought he would make some money trying luck . . . and instead lost it all!

Turned Into Nagger

"Honestly, it nearly killed me when I found it out . . . but he doesn't seem to make anything of it at all. He just acts as if he hadn't done a thing that wasn't perfectly all right!

"And I think it is terrible. We have had to work so hard to keep that insurance policy, and then to think that he would do something like that! And he actually gets angry when I mention it to him!

"He says that if I don't like it, I should take my half of our little savings and get out. And this, after being married for 23 years . . . and I've always been so honest with him, and worked so hard, and this is the return I am getting, after saving every penny for years, so that he wouldn't have to work when he gets old!

"His actions have turned me into a regular nagger, but I am trying very hard to control my tongue, in spite of it all. Oh, won't you please tell me what to do? I don't want to give up my home. I love my husband, and I'd do anything if we could be happy together again. What can I do to bring him to his senses?

"MARGARET"

Well, how about both of you "coming to your senses," sister? Yes, I mean that, straight from the shoulder. I am not excusing him, but you are just as much to blame for this trouble as he is, hard as it may be for you to realize it.

You speak, indignantly, of the "returns" you are getting . . . but did it ever occur to you to wonder what returns he's getting for his 23 years of struggle and work and loyalty?

Yes, I know, you've been honest and faithful and hard-working, and those are mighty fine qualities. But he needed more.

Must Alter Ways

He needed understanding, sympathy, an insight into his burdens and anxieties. You saved his money, and gave him a neat, well-kept house . . . but those are only the mechanics of marriage, my dear. And when depression hit his business, and drove him almost mad with worry . . . and he took a big chance and lost . . . instead of understanding how it had all come about, you let him down. You let him down when he needed gentleness and understanding and sympathy—and a good laugh—more than he had ever needed them in the whole of your life together.

You complain that he "actually gets angry" when you remind him of that humiliating mistake he made. Well, why shouldn't he? Do you like to have your mistakes rubbed in? Of course you don't! Then why should he? He knows well enough that he made one but, so long as you nag and criticize, he won't admit it. No one with the spunk of a mouse would.

Change your line, lady. Also your state of mind. Go to him, and tell him that you understand now just how desperate he was, and why he took the chance he did, and that you're sorry you flew off the handle . . . and that you want to forget the whole thing, and start to be friends and comrades all over again. Then act the part you have set for yourself. And I'll gamble that you'll find a new beauty and fineness in your life together.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Unpleasant body odors can be removed in nearly all cases by taking the soap and water bath every night, by applying commercial deodorants which are harmless, and by indulging in salt glow every morning. Moisten a bowlful of salt, rub into the body-surface briskly, turn on the tepid spray and chill gradually. Follow with a rub-down.

Exercise, good circulation, plenty of fresh air and restful sleep, backed up by simple nutritious food, will put roses in the cheeks. The petted darling who neither toils nor spins, who dances all night and loafs all day does not live according to the laws of health and hygiene, so must ladel her blushes from a rouge pot. She should up and hustle.

It is for the good of the complexion that it is covered with a light film of oil. Without this lubricant, supplied by nature, the cells would fluff away rapidly, and the skin surface would be in a constant state of roughness. Excessive oil should be removed with eau de cologne, witch hazel, or any good ointment.

Cut down the food supply and the stomach will adjust itself to the more limited allowance. Dieting to reduce isn't disturbing after the first day or two or three. One can eat generously of spinach, cabbage and other bulky vegetables which will satisfy the appetite and not put on an ounce of flesh. Fat builders are fat foods, starches and sweets. Don't delete them entirely; limit them.

A DOCTOR'S Advice for Constipation

"DRINK at least six glasses of water daily — preferably before meals. Eat bulkier foods, such as vegetables, fruits and coarse breads. Use a mild laxative as needed."

That is Dr. Caldwell's advice to people with stubborn bowels. He specialized on the bowels; treated thousands for constipation and its ills. The prescription he used over and over has become the world's most popular laxative! "Syrup Pepsin," as it is now called, was tested by over 47 years of practice.

Today you can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore in America. It is always the same; made exactly according to the original prescription, from laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients. Nothing in it to harm even a baby. It does not gripe, sicken or cause any discomfort. But it moves the bowels; it gets rid of all the souring waste which clogs the system and makes you headachy, gassy, bloated, weak, bilious. A doctor should know just what is best for the bowels. Syrup Pepsin is a famous doctor's choice of a safe, pleasant, effective laxative for men, women, older folks, and children.

Madge Puts Through Mysterious Long Distance Call

Mary's eyes sparkled with excitement and enthusiasm as I whispered to her that I must go out of the city in the early morning, not returning until the afternoon, and that I wished no one to know that I had gone.

"Can I help you manage it?" She repeated in an undertone. "Just watch me! Tell me what you want me to do."

"Nothing much, except to give the impression that I have gone shopping, which will be the truth, but not the whole truth. I shall start before the day force comes on, so there will be no one to remark my going save the night clerk and the night elevator man, both of whom will be off duty before any of you arise. I am taking no bag, only a purse, so no one will think I have gone out of the city."

"Oh! I thought you wanted me to do something hard or really exciting," she said in a disappointed tone. "This will be nothing at all. If or when anybody asks for you, I shall say that I didn't see you go out, which I won't, but that you've probably gone shopping, and that I don't know your plans for lunch, which I don't."

"This may be all for nothing," I said. "I am going to put in a long-distance call, and if conditions are as I think they are, I shall go, but there's a chance that I shan't have to call on you at all. If Mrs. Cosgrove—"

Mary clapped her hands over her ears.

"Please, Auntie Madge, I didn't hear anything," she said. "You see what I don't know, I can't even think, let alone speak, so please don't tell me anything, until you get back at least. As far as I know you're going shopping, and I want to stick to that until they don't give perfume sets for Christmas."

"All right, dear." I kissed her with warm approval. "You're a helper worth having. Now go to sleep, for there isn't a thing you can do for me now. But tomorrow after you waken I wish you'd get hold of Purnell and ask him to try to find some reindeer about this size"—I measured off an imaginary space, "They can be of any material, preferably light weight, but they must look like reindeer. If he can get them for a quarter or less apiece, have him get sixteen. But if he has to pay a dollar apiece, six will have to do. If they are more, I'll have to give up my planned decoration."

"I wish I could do your shopping for you," Mary said wistfully. "I could find those reindeer, and cheap, too. But I suppose there's no use in even thinking about it."

"Not unless you could take Mrs. Underwood with you," I said regretfully. "You know I told Mr. Veritzen that you could not go outside the hotel without either Mrs. Underwood of myself with you. Some time I'll tell you why."

"I'll do anything you say, dearest," she returned, and I went away with the warm little feeling that I had no stancher friend than my husband's young niece.

Padding past Dicky's door again, I stopped and listened intently, deciding that he was so sound asleep that there was no possible danger of his waking up while I was gone. Then I put on my shoes again, donned my motor coat which completely covered my evening gown and taking my key let myself noiselessly out of the door. Fortunately I met no one in the hall, and when I reached the lobby, the night clerk was the only person in evidence.

"I want to put in a long-distance call," I told him, "and my people are all asleep and must not be disturbed. Is there an empty apartment on our floor or one near it from which I may telephone? I will pay for the call as soon as I have finished talking. Then you will have no confusion as to the different room charges."

"That doesn't matter in the least," he said. "I can put it on your bill. And there's a room just around the corner from your apartment, on the same floor, which you can use. Tom will let you in and you can give the key back to him."

I walked away with Tom, the elevator operator, wishing that the clerk were not quite so accommodating. I did not wish this long-distance call to go upon the bill, for Dicky's possible scrutiny and questioning. I determined that I would pay it anyway, and risk the possible inquisitiveness of the clerk. But when I was seated in the empty room into which Tom had ushered me and put in my call for the Cosgrove home, I forgot everything else in wondering if I were justified in the intuition which had led me to make this call.

Household Hints

Egg stains on linen should be soaked in cold water before being sent to the laundry. The stains come out easily if treated in this way, but hot water will set them and make them doubly difficult to remove.

When dyeing a sweater, remove the buttons and weight the garment while it is dry. Buy enough dye to color the number of pounds the sweater weighs. It will never take a good color with insufficient dye.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, April 17

A day of setback, impediment and restlessness may be expected, judging by the intervention of major malefics in mutual menace. Affairs may be under a disruptive influence, with tendencies to make changes or removals, but tenacious obstacles and disagreeable experiences may hamper all initiative or real achievement. Personal matters may not be so disastrously afflicted.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared to meet a year of stubborn obstacles and impediments to the successful fruition of the most earnest efforts or cherished enterprises. It would be well to postpone important new ventures.

A child born on this day may be restless, unsettled and prone to new ventures, which may encounter much opposition and hostility.

Insulin Makes Surgery Possible for Diabetics

Recently I wrote about diabetes and the great strides that have been made in the treatment of this disease. You will recall that I spoke of the horrors and complications that in former days were so commonly associated with this ailment.

Dr. Copeland

Today I want to tell you a bit more about this condition. I have in mind particularly the surgical aspects.

Formerly, anyone with diabetes and having a condition that really required surgery was denied its application. Only the most urgent surgery was done on diabetics, and this only when there was no other alternative. When they were operated upon for such conditions as appendicitis or gall bladder disease, too often they failed to recover from the operation. Though the surgery had been accomplished with great skill, the patient had no powers of recovery.

With the introduction of insulin, the modern remedy for diabetes, radical changes have resulted. Emergency surgery as well as reparative surgery, can now be accomplished with a high degree of safety. All this has been made possible by the discovery of insulin.

However, it must not be overlooked that infections in persons who have diabetes are more serious than in otherwise normal individuals. The vitality is lowered and the resistance is below normal.

In view of the increased amount of sugar found in the blood, infections in such persons play great havoc. Somehow, the body is not able readily to take care of the infection and healing is slow or absent.

Injuries and bruises, so far as possible, must at all times be avoided. It is important that infections be recognized early. No diabetic must consider any abrasion or infection too lightly.

The diabetic should make particular effort to maintain a clean, unbroken skin. This is an asset he should possess if he can. In event of accident, proper treatment should be had at once. He should avoid so far as he can any need for surgery.

I do wish to impress upon you the importance of early recognition of infections and surgical diseases in the diabetic. Early operation is the surest way to escape serious complications.

REDUCE this Pleasant, Healthful Way, without diet or drugs

Ridding yourself of unwanted flesh the Fayro Way is as simple as bathing. There is no fuss nor bother, no need for anyone else, even in your own home, knowing of it at the time.

Fayro Baths are as zestful as the waters of natural health springs. Their mineral salts, dissolved in water, open the clogged pores of your skin and carry off the flabby subsurface fat that is a detriment to your health because it is more than the body requires.

Don't take doubtful internal preparations, which may break down your resistance to disease, or wrack your body with straining exercises. No rigorous diet should be undertaken except with the supervision of your physician. Just relax two or three times a week in a refreshing Fayro Bath and watch your excess weight disappear.

Read what Dr. McG., of Missouri, writes, "Am indeed happy to advise you that I have used Fayro Bath Salts and found them to do exactly what your literature claimed if not a little more." This is only one of hundreds of unsolicited letters* in our files. Here is another from Mrs. K., of Fort Smith, Ark., "I have used three boxes of Fayro and have lost ten pounds. I am expecting to lose much more."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Introduce—Introduce—and Introduce!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct to ask a former boy friend, whom you have not seen for quite a while, to buy a ticket to your sorority dance? I mean to call him on the telephone?

2. Is it correct, when you are at the dance and see people you know, to leave the young man you are with and go over to speak with them, or should you take him along and introduce him, or wait for the friends to come to you?

3. How should you go about getting dances for the young man you are with if he knows no one at the dance?

MISS L.

1. I can't feel that this would be a very appropriate thing to do. And I certainly would be sorry if you were to telephone him to ask him to buy a ticket. In my judgment, we have no right to ask people who aren't close friends to buy tickets . . . this is a matter on which we should, I think, develop deep sensitiveness. It is unattractive for us to place our friends, especially if they aren't close friends, in the awkward position of having to refuse to buy tickets. And, after all, why should this boy buy a ticket to your sorority dance, this boy whom you have not even seen for such a long time?

2. If you go to speak with other friends, ask your companion to come with you.

3. Introduce . . . and introduce . . . and introduce. This is the recipe for a dance!

Consider Those Who Are So Vitally Concerned

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a young couple to announce their engagement formally at an evening bridge party at the young lady's home without inviting the parents or relatives of either?

2. Have you a book on engagements and weddings? If so, please tell me how to obtain a copy.

MRS. M.

1. This plan would seem to me to take great pains to be socially unattractive. This event is such an important one to those whom such a plan would omit, that I should think that the parents and close relatives would feel deeply hurt . . . justifiably so. Why not plan this occasion with special care for those whom it most closely concerns?

2. I have quite a few pamphlets on weddings . . . the formation of the processional, the recessional, the appropriate clothes, the presents usually given to the attendants by the bride and groom, and so forth. I shall be very happy to send you this group of pamphlets, if you will send me an addressed envelope.

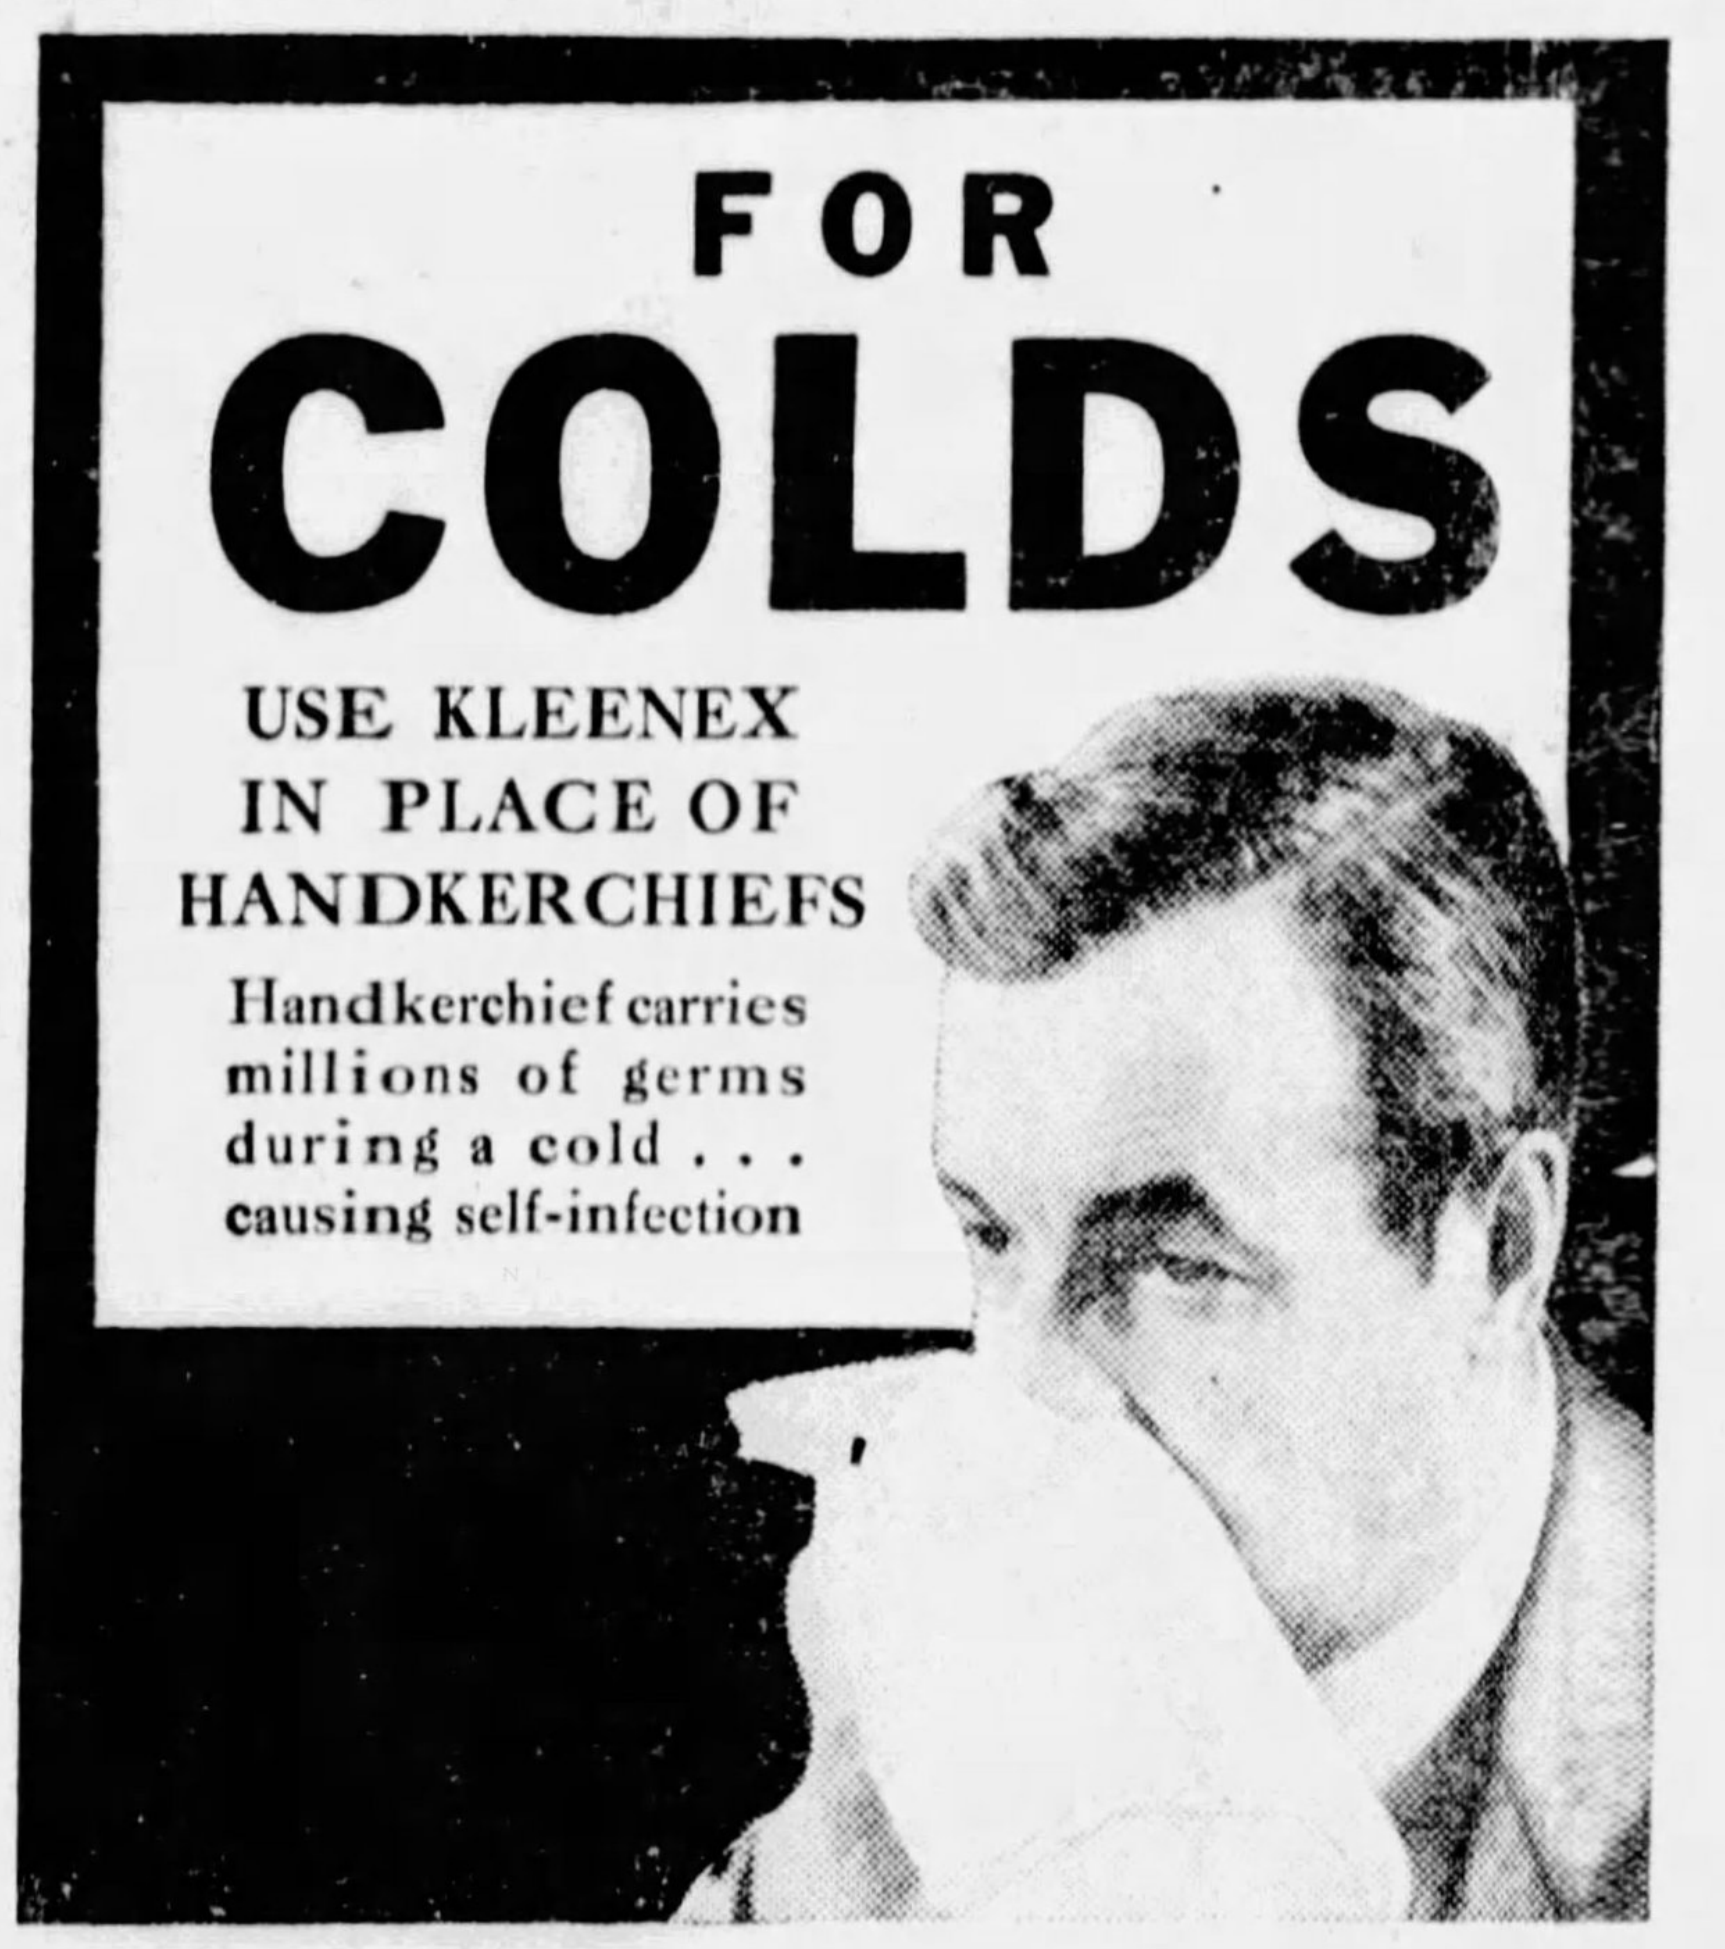
FOR COLDS

USE KLEENEX IN PLACE OF HANDKERCHIEFS

Handkerchief carries millions of germs during a cold . . . causing self-infection



Safety Demands Kleenex

Use it once . . . then discard

THE use of Kleenex in place of handkerchiefs may actually shorten the duration of your cold! This promise comes to us from the scientific laboratory, after a remarkable series of tests on handkerchiefs used during colds.

These tests reveal the vast numbers of disease germs discharged into a handkerchief during colds. As many as 240,000 in a handkerchief used one time! As many as 4,170,000 in a handkerchief used several times!

Kleenex protects

This means that the ordinary handkerchief carries countless germs back to the face every time it's used. Germs that should be destroyed—are destroyed when you use Kleenex.

You use Kleenex just once, then discard it. All germs are discarded, too. Each tissue that touches your face is absolutely clean. Think how much more sanitary!

Kleenex is a soft, immaculate, super-absorbent tissue, handkerchief size. So gentle, so soothing, that irritation is impossible. So inexpensive that each tissue may be used just once, then discarded.

A beauty use, too

Kleenex is advocated by beauty specialists for removing cold cream, cleansing cream, all cosmetics. It is marvelously absorbent. Removes all dirt along with cleansing cream. Saves towels from greasy stains.

Ask for Kleenex at any drug, dry goods or department store; 25c, 50c and $1. If you have not tried Kleenex send for a free trial package to the Kleenex Company, Lake Michigan Building, Chicago, Ill.

BACTERIOLOGICAL TESTS SHOW:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 germs per handkerchief.

2. That organisms representative of those known to be associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and/or soap water followed by clear water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

WORK OF CHILD BUREAU GROWS

An average monthly increase of 19 per cent over the previous year in problems brought to attention of the Children's Service Bureau was shown in reports submitted at the forty-sixth annual meeting of the bureau in the Fidelity Trust Company yesterday.

The report of David J. Terry, executive secretary, showed that on January 1 the department of applications, complaints and investigations had 637 active problems involving 1,592 children. There were 1,510 new applications and complaints involving 4,666 children during the year, making a total of 2,147 problems involving 5,658 children to this department.

critics are assigned to shows to keep showmen from misrepresenting presentations.

That story about the adorable Renee Adoree in the movie mag is too sad . . . It would have her admirers believe that she strands her nurses and doctors out there at the sanitarium in the prairies whenever she feels a little zippy—and hastens back to Hollywood to go gay again . . . She has done this several times, they report, disregarding those wealthy and friendly stars who are paying the bills for the sick room . . . Renee loves a party, they say, and would rather have one gala night and die, than decay there in the sunshine and fresh air without having any fun . . . Another tale the movie mags and the newspapers will soon hear will deal with another grand mimic, who was forgiven by the moguls when she promised to keep away from opium . . . She staged such a marvelous comeback . . . Now, they tell me, they have dumped her almost completed flicker, and fired her, because she has gone joss-house, again.

Wonder what a girl thinks about who has just been jilted . . . when she is sitting at the same table with the fellow she was going to marry . . . and the girl he married? . . . The other night, frixample . . . The scene in the gay place puzzled me . . . The shelved one, escorted by another stiff-shirt wearer, was a guest of the newlyweds! . . . When I asked her later if the bride knew that she was almost the veiled partner up the aisle, she replied: "Oh, yes, she's my best friend!" . . . Discretion, of course . . . Seneca declared that a woman either loves or hates—there is no third possibility . . . Women can bear pain more gracefully than men, anyhow . . . Reminds me of the gal last year, who called me over to her table and said: "Over there across the way is the fellow I went around with five years. He married that girl with him yesterday and called me up to tell me about it." . . . "Yeah?" I said, "who is she?" . . . "She's the girl," was the devastating answer, "I used to room with—and every time he took me out—I always suggested she come along—so she wouldn't get lonesome."

The word "crack" probably will be claimed someday by a "stylist," if a controversy is made about it . . . The current expression appears to be: "What kind of a crack is that?" . . . I must make a note of the fact, so that Dr. Vizetelly, of the dictionaries, will be saved the research trouble . . . In 1771 Oliver Goldsmith in "She Stoops to Conquer" used it in this manner: "That's a damned confounded crack!" . . . The loudest laughter in the Friars Club these days is aroused by a lad who has struck something new in dialect . . . Nearly everyone you meet offers a story in the Irish brogue, the Jewish dialect, the Scotchman's lingo or the Negro's. . . . The "shop-topper" offers a routine in the Greek manner and it is very comical . . . The highest salaried comedians flock about him and implore him to keep gagging . . . And he leaves them limp . . . He is the funniest of the lot, it appears, and they worship at his shrine . . . His name is George Givot, a singer, out of a job!

The next time I see Jimmy Walker I must show him some of the letters sent by cranks . . . Because I found something nice to say about him . . . "So you, too," go some of the stupid letters, "are on his payroll?" . . . And Heywood Broun finds a flaw in my recent comment about the Mayor . . . Heywood reminds me that the applause given politicians in Broadway theaters must not be taken seriously . . . With that I have to agree, come to think of it. . . . Broun must have had his recent campaign for Congress in mind . . . For when he was introduced to great crowds at a few Broadway theaters the applause was deafening . . . Yet, these same applauders forgot him at the polls—or they forgot to register. . . . I thought Jessel was a superb toastmaster at the dinner to Walker, but Jessel, for want of something sentimental to say, poked the newspapermen "who throw stones at you from their windows and we can't throw stones back" . . . It was good showmanship, of course, and there were numbers of listeners who shook their heads in approval . . . But Jessel couldn't have been serious . . . Without newspapers how could he read his bad notices?

APPEAL OVER 6 COWS ARGUED

Six cows were the basis of contention in an appeal argued here yesterday before the Pennsylvania Superior Court from Brookville, where John T. Swack obtained a judgment against S. C. Beeman, owner of the cows, and issued execution. After the sheriff's levy, Beeman executed an assignment to the Brookville Title and Trust Company, which claimed title to the cows and filed a sheriff's interpleader.

The court held the transfer invalid, as possession of the cows did not pass to the trust company and that the assignment in itself was fraudulent as to creditors. The trust company appealed.

Other appeals argued were: Frances Hilkirk against John A. Hughes, appellant; Rose Conti against Benefit Association of Railway Employes, appellant, and Mrs. Fannie Crawford against Shenango Valley Traction Company, appellant, Mercer County; Dixonville Deposit Bank against Marshall Federal Bakery, appellant, and Veda Neal, appellant, against Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railway Company, Indiana County; Albin Lundberg, appellant, against Anthony Hemphill and others, Jefferson County.

The Superior Court handed down decisions on appeals from eastern counties, argued at its Philadelphia session.

WEAK BATTING HOLDS PIRATES BACK

IT WAS ONLY as a desperate resort in an emergency, with Ervin Brame, Remy Kremer and Steve Swetonic unavailable, that Claude Willoughby was sent in to pitch for the Pirates at Chicago yesterday in the second game of the season, as the former Philly flinger was obtained for relief purposes rather than for starting assignments. But at that, Willoughby didn't do a half-bad job, and might have come through with a win if the fates hadn't helped the Cubs to a couple of scratch hits in a cluster of four safeties which netted them four runs in the third inning after two men had been retired. So the second consecutive defeat cannot be blamed wholly upon the new slabman.

Claude Willoughby

The cause of the Pirates' lame start is to be found rather on the offensive than in the hurling department. Even Kremer and Brame, when fit again, will not be able to win unless the rest of the Bucs start hitting the pill a whole lot harder than they are doing at present. Up to date the Ensmen are batting more than 100 points below normal.

WITH ALL DUE respect to the pitching of Charley Root and Bob Smith, the Pirates cannot be said to be anywhere near their right stride when they make just 11 hits in two full games for a club batting average of only .172. That was the record for the first two starts, and it is a clip not likely to win many games no matter who may be pitching for the Rovers or what kind of work he does.

The feebleness of the attack, too, is due chiefly to a failure to deliver on the part of the men who were expected to accomplish most. Paul Waner, Traynor, Grantham and Comorosky have made through their combined efforts exactly two singles in 28 times at bat. Neither Grantham nor Traynor has yet made a hit, and Grantham in particular is usually one of the greatest spring clouters in the country.

THE FACT THAT the weaklings to date are four of the club's main dependables is consoling rather than alarming, inasmuch as it means the early defeats do not bespeak a team weakness but has been due merely to an unnatural condition that can't last. Hitters like the four men named are not to be held in subjection long.

The Pirate case is not the only one showing that the strength of a club is not to be gauged by the nature of its start. The Robins are hot pennant favorites in many quarters, yet they did not fare any better than the Bucs on the first two days, losing both games to the Braves. The improved Tigers meanwhile dropped a couple to the Browns. And neither the Braves nor the Browns are to be considered nearly as strong as the club that trimmed the Ensmen.

THOSE CARDINAL PITCHERS are starting right out where they left off last fall, helped by weak opposition in Cincinnati. Flint Rhem, who won his last eight National League games in 1930, was credited with the Redbirds' victory in the opener, and Burleigh Grimes, who won 12 of his final 15 games last year prior to the world series, followed up yesterday by pitching the first shutout of the year in the big show. If the Cards come through again this season it's the pitching staff that will turn the trick. Some odd hurling form is in evidence elsewhere. The Giants used no fewer than eight flingers in their first two games, and yesterday, Henry Johnson, of the Yankees, piled up the unusual total of 12 strikeouts against the Red Sox, and yet had to be derricked in the eighth inning.

TY COBB and other far-famed veterans of the diamond have been invited to play in an old-timers' game that will be put on at Seattle, Wash., on Sunday, June 14, for the benefit of the Association of Professional Ball Players of America, but the oldest note of all will be sounded by the appearance of Amos Rusie as one of the pitchers.

Amos Rusie

Rusie, who now resides on his Auburn ranch only 20 miles from Seattle, has consented to pitch one inning, with old Dug Dugdale as his catcher. John McGraw and Clark Griffith have been requested to furnish a New York and a Washington uniform, respectively, to be worn by the venerable battery.

RUSIE WAS ONE of the greatest speed-ball pitchers of all time, and in the heyday of his career with the New York Giants was a terror to all the batsmen in the National League. One of his fast pitches, striking Hughey Jennings on the head, almost caused the death of the then famous shortstop of the Orioles.

Rusie starred with the Giants from 1890 to 1898. He remained out of the game the next two seasons on account of a salary disagreement, and retired permanently after failing in an attempted comeback with Cincinnati in 1901. On July 31, 1891, his second year with the Giants, he pitched a no-hit game against Brooklyn.

ONE OF RUSIE'S catchers, first in Indianapolis and later in New York, was the late Dick Buckley, of this city, whose gnarled and twisted fingers attested the speed of the pitching he had to handle. Another Pittsburgher who was among Rusie's teammates on the Giants was the late Dr. Mark Baldwin. Among other famous old-timers on the New York club during Rusie's time were Buck Ewing, King Kelly, Johnny Ward, Roger Connor, Hardie Richardson, Mickey Welch, Tim Keefe, George Gore, Jerry Denny, Jack Glasscock, Duke Farrell, Mike Tiernan, Jouett Meekin, Lester German, Jess Burkett and Dad Clarke.

ONE THING THAT the recent hockey series for the Stanley Cup served to explode was the theory that Les Canadiens were merely great front runners and not so hot in the face of threatened defeat. A prominent manager pronounced the Montreal icers almost unbeatable if they scored the first goal, but asserted that if his own club could get a goal against them in the first 10 minutes it would defeat them in four out of five starts.

The Stanley Cup series shattered that pet belief. The fourth game found both the series and the score against Les Canadiens. The Chicago Blackhawks were leading in the series, two wins to one, got the jump in the score in the fourth contest, and had the cup almost in their grasp. But in a brilliant rally Les Canadiens came from behind, scored four goals to win the game and deadlock the series, and then went on to capture the fifth game and the trophy for the second year in succession. They showed their greatest strength in the one point where they had been called weak.

AS WAS TO have been expected, Equipoise became a stronger favorite than ever for the Kentucky Derby as a result of his impressive victory in the Glen Oaks Purse at Havre de Grace the other day, his first start of the year.

The Derby price of the C. V. Whitney color-bearer has shortened from 4 to 1 to 2½ to 1, and race experts express the opinion that the horse may be priced at even money by the time the Churchill Downs classic is run on May 16.

Helene Madi

THEY'VE DISCOVERED another reason why Miss Helene Madison is so far superior to all other girl speed swimmers of this or any other age. She swims just like Johnny Weismuller, who for a long time was smashing the men's records as frequently as the Seattle maid is now breaking the women's marks. The two stars use almost precisely the same style, according to Miss Madison's coach, Ray Daughters. "Helene's swimming form is almost exactly that of Weismuller," he said. "If you look at them swimming together from a distance, it is impossible to tell which is which, except by guessing right."

Free linkers held the spotlight in the local golf realm this morning with the long-awaited opening of the Schenley Park course ushering in the season. A goodly number of the free linkers were on hand at the first tee at 9 o'clock this morning to see Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang drive the first ball, marking the inaugural of another season at the popular Schenley Park course. Councilmen Allderdice and Herron, and John Jay Burke were among the other city officials in attendance.

Bob Graham, recently appointed professional to succeed Al McBride, who goes to the new South County Park, was on hand to greet his many friends and other patrons of the Schenley Park course.

OPENING EARLY

Assisting Graham in the official duties at Schenley are Monty Oneretta, Tom McDonough, Andy Petrolia, Eddie Kunold and Tom Keefe. Today's opening is 15 days earlier than in previous years.

Dates and sites for tourneys under the supervision of the W. P. G. A. were more or less definitely set at the annual spring meeting of the association at the P. A. A. last night. Newly elected officers were inducted into office, the list including Harmar D. Denny, Jr., of Fox Chapel, as president; J. R. Dunn, of Oakmont, vice president; George A. Ormiston, of Oakmont, secretary, and J. W. Barber, Charters Heights, treasurer.

Both the amateur and open tournaments likely will be held at Fox Chapel. The amateur probably will be held August 14, 15 and 16, and the open August 12.

SENIOR PLAY JUNE 16

The annual father-and-sons meet also will be played at Fox Chapel on June 29 and the senior tournament will be held at Oakmont, June 16. The junior will be staged on July 23, the site to be named later.

Bedford Springs will get the pro-amateur play on Sunday, August 2. The state open will be played in Philadelphia on July 14 and 15. It was also announced that the W. P. G. A. team matches will have 16 teams in the running.

Chester H. Lehman, Westmoreland Country Club, made a plea in behalf of the caddies. Lehman, who inaugurated scholarships for caddies, suggested that members visit the homes of the club toters to discuss their problems. The golfers also were asked to support the bill now pending in Harrisburg that would exempt boys under 14 years of age from being included in the provisions of the Child Labor Law.

J. W. Carr, of the Field Club; R. W. Smith, Greensurg; L. W. Young, Allegheny, and George Willock, of Oakmont, were elected to the executive committee for three-year terms.

It was decided to send telegrams of best wishes for a speedy recovery to E. M. Byers and W. C. Fownes, Jr., both former national amateur champions, who are recuperating in the South from recent illnesses.

John Jay Burke announced that E. V. Babcock would offer permanent trophies for the men's championships to be played over the South Park links.

It was announced by John Jay Burke that the new South County Park links would be opened on May 15.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE LARGEST MOUTH IN THE WORLD—The owner of the largest mouth in the world was a Baltimore Negro, member of a traveling troupe of freaks, exhibited in all parts of the United States and Europe more than a decade ago. He contrived, by some specific extention exercises, to enlarge his mouth to such an extent that he could with ease introduce a 12-inch plate into it. I have drawn my cartoon from an original photograph depicting him in the act of performing this amusing feat. HIGH COST OF DOUBLE PETUNIA SEED—A quotation from the seed catalog of the Atlee Burpee Company, of Philadelphia, reads as follows: "Double Petunia, 2574 Fordhook Fancy Fringed, an excellent, carefully hand-pollenized strain, yielding a large percentage of plants having double, finely fringed flowers. Embraces a splendid variety of colors and many beautiful combinations; 1-128 oz. $1.65." An ounce, therefore, would cost $211.20 and a pound $3,379.20.

PITT SQUADS DINE TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER

Pitt's very noble basketballers, swimmers, golfers, tennisers, cross-country addicts, boxers and marksmen will gather in Webster Hall tonight for a free meal, the opportunity to listen to some after-dinner speechifying and to be awarded letters and numerals for the past year.

In addition, captains for forthcoming campaigns will be named, principal interest in the last named ceremony centering on the appointment of a leader, or leaders, for Dr. H. C. Carlson's basketball team.

The athletes will be the guests of the university's athletic council. The varsity contestants will be given their letters and the frosh numerals. It will be the first time in history that boxing and golf teams have been so honored.

Dr. Carlson, the court mentor, who, as we all know, is more or less reticent, has indicated that he may appoint co-captains for his basketball team. If he does, it looks from this point as though Docky Kowallis and Timmy Lawry will win the honor. No more than seven varsity court letters will be awarded.

The Tipoff

Assistant Athletic Director Jimmy Hagan, of Pitt, has announced the Panther varsity golf schedule for this year. The Pitt mashie wielders will open with George Washington at Washington, April 24; meet Georgetown U. the next day and then take on Notre Dame at South Bend on May 16. Sam Parks, Jr., who finished in the runner-up slot in the annual North-South amateur tourney at Pinehurst last week, is captain of the club.

Some of Westminster College's fairest have entered Pitt's annual play day, scheduled for the Pitt playgrounds, May 8. No less than 25 Titan lassies will contest for the honors of the day, whatever they may be, with Pitt's co-eds. The advance ducat sale must be terrific.

Tomorrow night, Bob Waddell, Carnegie Tech's head football coach, will address the Father and Sons banquet of the Hi-Y Club of Aliquippa High School. Only those who have enjoyed the privilege of hearing Bob talk can appreciate the treat the Fathers and Sons are in for.

Saturday, at Morgantown, the two strongest college track and field teams in the district will clash in a dual meet. The winner may be crowned, even at this very early date, the champion of the tri-state area. The contesting squads will be West Virginia and Geneva.

Moe Rubenstein, head athletic coach at Ambridge, started his spring football practice this week, issuing an optional call to the school's grid candidates. The turnout looked like a raid on the U. S. Mint.

Helene Madison, 17-year-old speedster from the Washington A. C., Seattle, whose first eastern appearance is the feature of the championships, is to try for her first new title and record in the 100-yard free style, a strong favorite to win. The 300-yard medley swim and the low board fancy dive are the other events on tonight's program. The championships will be continued at the Women's Swimming Association Saturday and Sunday after moving to the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. tomorrow.

CHICAGO, April 16.—The gloom was a bit thick in the Pirate camp this morning, yet it was not sufficiently dense to obscure the silver lining that would quickly show itself in the event of a victory or two. The sadness is all due to the fact that the Cubs are two up on our boys after two days of championship play at Wrigley Field. The Freebooters really had the winning run on the paths in the ninth inning storm yesterday, but Lester Bell, Harrisburg boy, reeled off a thrilling play on Pie Traynor's hopper and the Bears were the owners of another success, 6 to 5.

Manager Ens, like his players, is a bit downhearted over the results of the first two battles, but Ens came up smiling today as he said he would send Heinie Meine to the mound against the Bruins in the third game of the hectic series. Ervin Brame and Remy Kremer, the two aces of our star shooting division, are still under the doctor's care.

MEINE TO HURL

Meine is likely to be opposed by Sheriff Fred Blake from West Virginny. The Sheriff is high in the esteem of Manager Hornsby of the Bears. The home club, by the way, is off to a good start and Chicago fans are all excited over the outlook. Just the same it's a long way to Tipperary.

Claude Willoughby worked the second game for the Buccos and aside from the third round the former Quaker gave a pretty exhibition. After two were out in the third, Manager Hornsby scratched a single off Claude's glove. A moment later the bases were filled and Stephenson singled. Gabby Hartnett tripled, the three resultant tallies giving the Bears a commanding lead.

The Pirates rallied in the fifth and sixth to score five runs. In the ninth the Waner boys were on second and first with two out when Capt. Traynor and Smith went to the mat. A threatening storm made the diamond a wild-looking spot. Smith worked hard on Traynor and eventually Bell threw out the Pittsburgh captain for the final out.

It was none other than the clever Mister Cuyler of pleasant memory who started the Chicago scoring, and Kiki did this very early. He jumped off for the Cubs

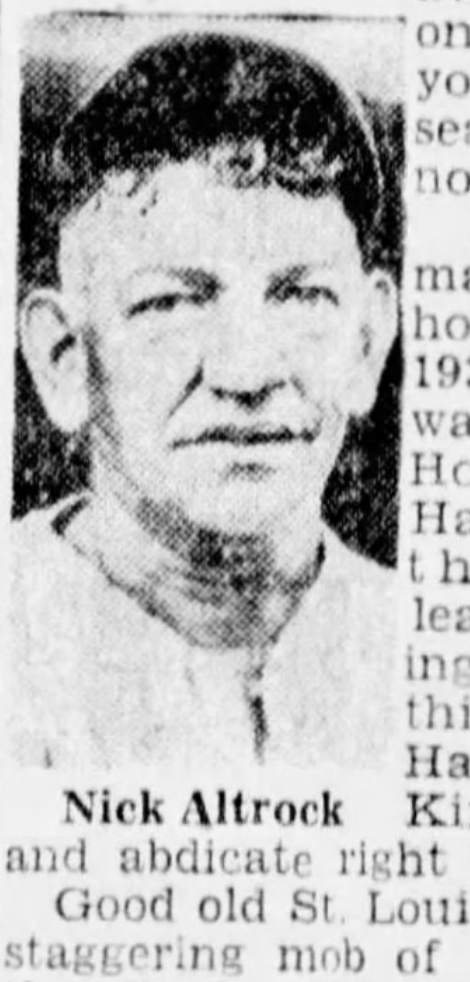
Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Well, folks, when you find the Red Sox and Phillies collecting an average of 000 on opening day, you know the season has got a normal start.



Nick Altrock

Babe Ruth manufactured a homer in his 1931 debut. That was notice to Home Run King Hack Wilson that the big leagues are going Republican this season and Hack can do a King Alfonso and abdicate right now.

Good old St. Louis turned out a staggering mob of 7,000 to greet the Cards. It took that many ushers in the Yankee Stadium just to show the customers their seats. Unless a wave of distemper hits the St. Louis dog tracks those early returns indicate the grandstand at Sportsman's Park is in for another season of looking like a haunted house.

Bobby Jones

On Sunday, March 29, Leo Diegle and I played a charity match at Agua Caliente against George Von Elm and Mortie Dutra, and our side came out second best by the margin of one hole. It was the first even semi-serious competition I had had since the national amateur in Philadelphia, and it was very enjoyable. Indeed, I have always liked to play exhibition matches. They are just serious enough—good four-ball matches, with fine players and fine fellows, where everybody tries hard and the crowd adds its bit to the thrill, yet no one feels badly over losing.

I was particularly interested that Sunday in watching Mortie Dutra. This boy is really one of the very finest golfers in the game today, and one who can go a long way as he gains experience and confidence in himself. I think he is rapidly finding both. Certainly he has the nerve to try any shot and the skill to bring off most of them. Although Von Elm stuck to the duce at the fifteenth which gave his team the winning margin, it was Dutra who carried the burden most of the way. He played the long Caliente course in 70 strokes, two better than my score, and he holed a nice putt on the seventeenth for a birdie 4 and a half when it unquestionably meant the match.

PLAYS ALL SHOTS WELL

Dutra is unique in one respect—that he is now 31 years old yet he has only just developed to his full stature as a golfer. Out here on the Coast, he has been recognized as a fine player for years—I remember Tommy Armour telling me about a great match he had with Mortie several years ago—but something has always gone wrong when he has gone East. But at Caliente I saw him play every kind of shot from tee, fairway and bunker and I can say that he goes about them all like a golfer.

To give a few examples: at the very first hole he hit a drive and a spoon which both split the pin, and then he dropped a 12-foot putt for a 3. At the second hole his drive caught a big bunker on the right side of the fairway, and his second shot, although bravely struck, finished in a bunker on the left of the green. That left him with a most difficult third—a vast expanse of sand to play over, the hole quite close to the edge of the bunker, and the green sloping away from the shot. He brought off a beauty, the ball pitching over with a sharp backspin which stopped it about a yard from the hole. When I saw that one shot I knew the man could play golf.

STEEL SHAFTS APPROVED

Another thing which interested me in this match was the test which I gave a new set of steel-shafted irons which I had just obtained. When I was playing in tournaments I was a little bit afraid to fool with the steel, but now that I have no more worries of that kind I feel entirely free to do what experimenting I like. These clubs only arrived in time for me to play one round with them on Saturday before the match so that I was not as familiar with them as I should have liked to be, but even at that I found them very satisfactory. Throughout the round my iron shots were as good as I had any right to expect them to be, and if Calamity Jane had been behaving herself everything would have been all right.

with a single to right and then hustled to third on English's single.

Thevenow failed to get Smith's grounder in the third and it was called a hit, although it probably would have been scored as a fumble in a Class B league where the scorers are not so generous. Cuyler sacrificed and English popped out. Hornsby singled off Willoughby's glove as Smith advanced and the bases were filled when Wilson walked. Stevie came through with a single to center scoring two Cubs and sending Hack to third. Up came Hartnett with a triple to center to score the other two Bruins.

Hornsby's homer into the center-field bleachers was struck at the outset of the home half of the fifth. Grantham started the Pittsburgh advance in the sixth with a walk. P. Waner singled to center, Grantham taking second. Traynor forced Brother Paul as George advanced. Hornsby fumbled Comorosky's hard bounder. Grantham scored on the drive and Traynor reached third on the fumble. Suhr singled to center to score Pie, Comorosky speeding to third. Commy tallied with the third run of the inning as Thevenow was tossed out. With the tieing run on second Hemsley hammered a savage liner to center, but Hack was in front of the drive.

REVIVAL SHOW JAMMED WITH PYROTECHNICS

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

A crowd of approximately 2,500 more or less credulous souls, most of them admitted on passes to "paper" the first house—the receipts were announced as $1,700, and the prices were $1, $2 and $3, and most of ringside seats were filled—were taken in by the "rasslers" in the opening show of the "revival" of the sport at Motor Square Garden last night.

And how they were taken in by the troupe of 200-pounders "exhibited" by Arthur Sharkey, the boxing commission's only authorized promoter in Western Pennsylvania, although he never staged bouts in this section before, while local interests, including the Meyers Bowl for some mysterious reason, are denied licenses to operate mat shows.

BOUTS RUSHED THROUGH

Five bouts were put on and the "show" was over in an hour and a half, the last bout ending a minute or two after 10 o'clock. The only protection the fans got in the way of promised relief from hippodroming and outright faking was a flock of warnings from the referee, Charley Reinecke, himself an old-time wrestler, addressed to the pugilistically-inclined combatants to cut out the rough stuff and stick to wrestling. He made no attempt to stop any of the bouts, and Jim McMillen and a trial horse named Young Romano climaxed the night's carnival of hokum by tossing each other out of the ring—on the press row side, where the falling was easier—and forced the police to come down and make Romano quit assuming a threatening attitude toward McMillen, who was down under the ring steps rolled up into a ball.

Even this was not enough to sicken the referee or the boxing commissioner, who let them continue a bit longer until McMillen got in a few foul body butts and did some high and fancy tossing and slamming and finally leaped at his man with what was declared to be a flying tackle, under which the rugged Romano slowly sagged until his shoulders touched the mat and the agony was over. The time was 20 minutes 6 seconds.

"I BREAK—I BREAK"

Throughout the bout, Romano was the actor and McMillen the straight man, with slugging, kneeing, kicking and all of the other pyrotechnics of a spectacular fake match entering into the performance. Romano even pulled the time-honored gag about "I break, I break," as he twisted McMillen's leg, thus insuring the success of the bout from an artistic standpoint.

Dick Shikat, wrestling in his bare feet, gave the only really scientific exhibition of wrestling in wearing down and finally tossing Andy Zahraroff, alleged Russian peasant, with a body slam in 11 minutes 14 seconds of the semi-final.

Hans Steinke, giant Chicago German, was too powerful for the veteran Wladek Zbyszko, of New York, and easily bested him in the main 30-minute time limit match, but the referee and Judge John Sill kicked this one around and called it a draw. The other judge, Dr. A. R. Cratty, rightly voted for Steinke, but his slip did not count.

HOKUM GALORE

Jim Clinstock threw Jack Washburn with a well-rehearsed jumping body scissors in 7 minutes 30 seconds of the second bout, and Tiny Roebuck flopped Willie Davis with a body hold in 6 minutes 25 seconds of the opener.

To relate in detail the hokum introduced into these bouts would be to dignify the show with space it does not deserve. Suffice to say that the wrestlers got away with "murder" to the accompaniment of the muttered curses and wisecracking of the crowd, and that the commission ought to read its own rules and instruct the referees on them as well before any more wrestling shows are permitted to be "staged" here. It was announced that another one will be perpetrated in the same ring on April 29. Meanwhile the troupe plans to violate the peaceful serenity of Erie next week. East Lynne probably will be the next stop—or is that a show, too?

RIVAL IS EJECTED

Incidentally, McMillen was permitted to violate a new rule of the State Athletic Commission by wrestling a main bout in Baltimore the night before showing here. The rule stipulates that 48 hours must elapse between such appearances.

To add to the hilarity, if such it may be called, of the evening, at the Garden a would-be rival promoter of wrestling, Alexis Ardolino, a local man, who has been denied a license by the commission, was given the bum's rush from the arena by the gendarmes when he tried to see some of his pals among the grapplers. Was there fun? Not to mention a bigger and better brand of grunting and groaning by the grapplers that bordered on and might have passed as first-class hog-calling.

But don't let us stir up this thing any more. Remember, most of the folks got in for nothing last night so they can't say the wrestlers took money under the false pretense of wrestling on the level. And we hope we haven't boosted this new racket to the extent that anyone reading these lines will be able to say we had anything to do with making him a wrestling addict. Forewarned is forearmed, and it's every man for himself from now on in the battle against the malignant disease so successfully winked off by the authorities last night.

Between Rounds

Three boxing shows are carded in the Pittsburgh district tonight. One of them is a professional bill at McKeesport, and the two others are amateur affairs at the Y. M. H. A. and the Pittsburgh Lyceum.

Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, and Tiger Joe Randall, of Pittsburgh, welterweight rivals, meet in a return clash in the 10-round main bout at McKeesport, with Buddy McArthur, of McKeesport, and Lloyd Clements, of Swissvale, light-heavyweights, boxing the semi-final. Jimmy Reilly, of McKeesport, and Angel Vergiona, of Swissvale, are in the second bout, and Joey Angelo, of Braddock, and Kid Blues, a Negro newcomer, in the opener.

The Y. M. H. A. program brings together teams from that organization and the Boys' Club of Pittsburgh in seven bouts. Accommodations are available for more than [illegible] fans. The card, with the "Y" boxers named first: P. Goldstein vs. Stan Kelly, Frank Tatomer vs. Hayn Wesley, Louis Leon vs. Leo Snyder, Jack Grossman vs. McIntyre, V. [illegible] vs. Al Devall, Walter Geis vs. Mon Higgins and Bernie Sloane vs. Howard Kearns.

Three A. M. A. senior champions will appear on the Lyceum card. They are Fritz Zivic, who meets Gerald Clements, Eddie Zivic, who boxes John Smith, and Max Elling, who tangles with Jack Snyder. Other bouts: Joey Chemes vs. John Shepler, Joe Malco vs. Al Van Gur, Tony Contantino vs. Mike Evanko, and Ben Pulley vs. Sparky Ewalt.

Benny Touchstone and Frankie Simms, heavies, box at Ypsilanti, Mich., tonight. Del Fontaine and Ted Ross are in for a 10-rounder at Davenport, Ia.

Tony Herrera will box Steve Halaiko and Roger Bernard will oppose Harry Dublinsky in feature preliminaries to the Tony Canzoneri-Jack (Kid) Berg double championship bout in the Chicago Stadium Friday night of next week. Ralph Lenny boxes Lud Abella, of Spain, in another eight-rounder.

The Joe Walters-Pal Silvers middleweight battle at the Moose Temple a month ago goes down in the records as one of the hardest-fought windups of the season in this city, and the fans are looking for a repetition of the heated action when the same pair meet in the same ring for 10 rounds tomorrow night. The first bout was declared a draw, although Walters, a Negro of Springfield, O., had an edge with his harder hitting against the cleverness of the New York veteran.

Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, meets Lee Feser, former of the Marines, in the semi-final at the Moose. Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, boxes Jack Thompson, Negro, of Warren, O., in the second bout, and Tony Bazzone, brother of Joe, battles Carl Montebano, Braddock middleweight, in the first bout.

The Midget Wolgast-Archie Bell show at the Garden last Monday night grossed only around $3,300, and the club hopes to stage a comeback with its card of next Monday night, with Pete Suskey and Bucky Lawless in the 10-round windup. Suskey has battled Jackie Fields, Rene De Vos and Joe Dundee recently, and is rated a tough battler. Jack Tracey meets Honey Boy Shimar, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in the semi-final, Billy Flanagan and Georgie Chambers are in the second bout and Jimmy Reilly meets U. S. Carpentier in the opener.

The chances are the Garden will stage only three more shows after next Monday's card before giving way to the outdoor season. King Levinsky and Emmett Rocco are the main-bouters for April 27 and Eddie Shea meets Steve Smith on May 4. A show on May 11 likely will ring down the curtain.

Tiger Joe West, of Monessen, meets Jack McVey, of New York, in the 10-round main bout at Erie tomorrow night. Joe Boler boxes U. S. Carpentier, Jimmy Dean meets Tony Sciolino and Luther McCarthy is paired with Matty Oldach in the preliminaries.

Despite reports that Jack De Mave has retired from the ring, now that he is married, he is matched to box Ike McFowler in a return bout at Johnstown on the night of April 28.

Rockne's Adventures With Grid Officials, Scribes Many, Varied

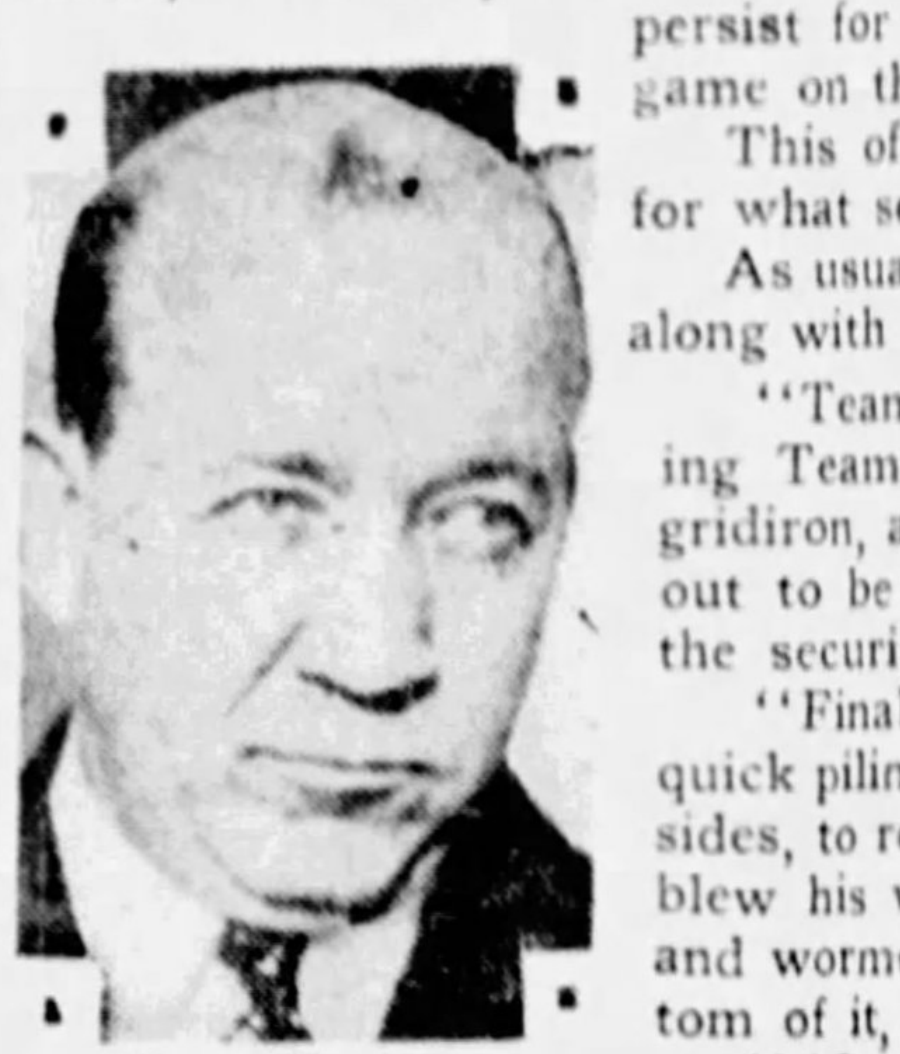
ROCKNE'S LIFE STORY—FIFTEENTH INSTALMENT

By WARREN BROWN

(Copyright, 1931, Chicago Herald and Examiner. Distributed by Universal Service.)

Some of Rockne's adventures with football officials are a story in themselves.

He had his critical moments with officials, as any other coach, but in only one instance did his feelings in the matter persist for much longer than the next game on the schedule.



Knute Rockne

This official drew Rockne's wrath, for what seemed to him to be bias.

As usual, he had a story which went along with it.

"Team A," he said, "was playing Team B, on the latter's own gridiron, and the referee was turning out to be one of the real threats to the security of A's position.

"Finally there was a fumble, a quick piling up of the players on both sides, to recover the ball. The referee blew his whistle, dived into the pile and wormed his way to the very bottom of it, finally clutching the ball.

"'Our ball!' he yelled."

Joe Lipp, an official who worked in many Notre Dame games, year after year, called more penalties, one afternoon, than Rockne thought were proper.

After the game, Rockne met Lipp.

"Hello, Cyclops," he said.

"What's the idea of the 'Cyclops'," demanded Lipp.

"Well, you had only one eye out there today, didn't you?" replied Rockne.

HACKETT SCORED

One of his last sallies at an official was directed at Col. H. B. Hackett, one of the best known of the western group.

Col. Hackett had handled the Notre Dame-Northwestern game of 1930, and a short time later, on the eve of the Army-Notre Dame game, a dinner was given, which was attended by representatives of all the schools that had been on the Notre Dame schedule that year. Friends and acquaintances of Rockne were there in great numbers, and Col. Hackett was among them.

The speaker's table held an imposing array of coaches, athletic directors, faculty representatives, and others—but no officials.

Col. Hackett remarked the oversight to Jay Wyatt, another official, and one of Rockne's closest friends.

"Something should be done about the officials," remarked Col. Hackett, by way of conversation.

When Rockne began his speech, he had something to say about everyone of note, present. And finally he got around to Col. Hackett.

"He blew his whistle so often in that Northwestern game," said Rockne, "that he kept right on blowing it in his sleep. When he awoke the next morning, five dogs had jumped in bed with him."

The colonel's desire that something should be done about the officials was more than satisfied.

Rockne was not averse to turning the point of a story against himself.

He was discussing, one day, the reaction of some of his followers to his newspaper writings.

"I was down in Florida, grinding out something every day," he said, "and I guess some of it was pretty bad. I didn't realize how bad, until I got a telegram from a fellow up in Minneapolis.

"'I've been reading in the papers about your illness," he wired, "'and all they talk about is that blood clot in your leg. After reading some of the stuff you write, I'm convinced that the doctors are wrong. The blood clot's in your head'."

MYSTIFIED BY SCRIBES

Rockne always professed to be mystified by the operations of some newspapermen, though he had more experience with them than almost any other American.

He reached a certain city one day, and lingered but a short time, but long enough to be discovered by a newspaperman.

"He asked me how I was, and I told him I was in good shape," Rockne said, "and I asked him how he was, and he told me he never felt better. Then he went his way and I went mine. The next day he had an interview with me that was a little more than two columns wrong—er, I meant to say 'long.'

'Sometimes I wish I could give my football teams so little, and get so much in return."

Rockne read a great deal.

His tastes were chiefly biographies, though he went in a good deal for mystery stories, Edgar Wallace being his favorite author in that line. One of the last books he read was a story of Pasteur. He was greatly interested in that, and said it was the greatest book he had ever read.

"You ought to read it," he said. "I don't suppose you'd understand it, but you ought to read it."

Rockne was not one to store up writings about himself or his team, but I doubt if many of these sort of stories ever escaped him. His desk was forever cluttered up with clippings sent him from all parts of the country by friends or well wishers, or, as the case might be, dissenters. Generally the clippings had penciled notes by the senders. I am sure that Rockne read them all, and I am as sure that he forgot them, save when they might be used for some effect he desired to create.

Rockne did quite a bit of work in motion pictures, and creditable work.

PREPARES SCENARIOS

He had prepared scenarios for a half dozen "shorts" just before his tragic end.

There was some discussion of a feature length picture, which aimed to reflect the spirit of Notre Dame, and of Rockne.

He was fearful of that.

"They might insist on having me play a guitar under a balcony, in one of the scenes," he said, "and while I know that they work miracles in photography, they're never going to make me look like a Barrymore or a Buddy Rogers."

There were times in his last two years when it seemed impossible for Rockne to keep up with all his activities.

He had his football, in season, and spring practice. He appeared at summer coaching schools. He wrote for the newspapers and magazines. He made frequent radio appearances, and was constantly attending luncheons and dinners as guest speaker. The demand for him as a speaker brought him to more than an ordinary lot of schools and colleges. He was engaged in the stock and bond business, and an exhorter for the sales forces of the Studebaker Corporation. Add to that his motion picture work, his duties as athletic director at Notre Dame, and his thousand and one other activities, and it is difficult to understand how he had time for his family.

And yet Rockne was essentially a family man.

Forbes Field Hot Dogs Get New Master

Jacobs Brothers, of Buffalo, who dispense hot dogs, peanuts, soft drinks, etc., in more than 40 baseball parks from Montreal to Waco, Tex., are to appease the thirst and appetite of local fans at Forbes Field this season.

The new concessionaires recently expended $20,000 in installing new equipment which they figure will make for the utmost in speedy service and sanitation. To ease any pain which a purchaser may experience in parting with his coin, attractive young ladies have been engaged to do the dispensing.

The scorecards are to be of a new model.

Bowstrom Resigns As Navy Coach

ANNAPOLIS, April 16.—(AP.)—Robert (Blimp) Bowstrom, of Grand Rapids, Mich., captain of Navy's 1930 football team, has announced he was to resign from the service at his graduation in June and seek a coaching position. He said his action was prompted by his love for athletics.

The announcement came as a surprise here. In addition to football he played guard on the Academy basketball team.

NATS' HURLER BAFFLES A'S; YANKS WIN

Associated Press.

Fans who haven't already forgotten the pre-season hullabaloo over the new baseball used in the major leagues this year may well wonder after two days of big time play what effect the altered sphere is having.

It seems evident that the ball still is lively as the home runs are made at their usual rate, but good pitching performances appear on the increase as well. Eight pitchers went the full route in the two major leagues yesterday, an unusual number for the second day of the season.

GRIMES HURLS SHUTOUT

Hadley, of Washington, and Burleigh Grimes, veteran spitballer of the St. Louis Cardinals, shared the topmost hurling honors. Hadley limited the World Champion Philadelphia Athletics to four hits while the Senators fell on George Earnshaw for five runs in the fourth inning and a 7-to-1 victory. Grimes pitched the year's first shutout, setting the Cincinnati Reds down with seven blows as the Cards won 4-0. Red Lucas went the route for Cincinnati.

Bob Smith, of the Chicago Cubs, and Claude Willoughby, of Pittsburgh, staged a full length duel, the Cubs winning their second straight 6 to 5.

Continuing the surprises of the opening day, the Boston Braves and St. Louis Browns each won a second successive game and joined the Cubs, Cardinals and New York Yankees in the top positions of the two leagues.

Although both were hit rather freely, Sam Gray, of St. Louis, bested Waite Hoyt, of Detroit, to gain a 6-to-4 triumph. Seibold held the Brooklyn Robins to eight hits to give the Braves a 9-to-3 triumph. The Braves hit safely 17 times and the Robins contributed seven errors.

YANKS BEAT SOX

The two New York teams figured in the leading slugging contests. With Lou Gehrig's first home run as the big blow, the Yanks scored five runs in the first inning then barely outlasted the Boston Red Sox, putting over a run in the ninth to win 8-7. The Phillies slammed five Giant pitchers and scored eight runs in the second inning to triump 10-7.

In the remaining game, the White Sox squared their series with Cleveland by a 7-to-6 10-inning victory.

SILVER LAKERS WIN

Westinghouse pounded out a 12-1 victory over Allderdice in a Section I, City League baseball game yesterday. Neither team scored up to the fourth inning, when Westinghouse started its attack.

FOCH SPEEDED U. S. TROOPS TO FRANCE

great American army as soon as possible, although he was not, it is true, fully aware of the urgency of our present necessities.

Infantry Needed

He and I readily fell into accord regarding this point in the course of a conference held at Sarcus on April 25, which was also attended by Gen. Bliss. After a close discussion it was decided that the American troops to be brought over in May and June should in principle consist, first of all, of infantry.

For the month of May the question was settled there and then. For the month of June it was agreed that a definite decision would be taken a little later; but from now on it was understood that the government at Washington would prepare to send the infantry of at least six divisions to France.

This meeting at the same time disclosed the urgent necessity for directing and co-ordinating to the advantage of the coalition the effort being put forth by the United States, directing it so as to admit it to necessities as they arose, coordinate it so as to prevent personal arrangements, such as that concluded between Gen. Pershing and Lord Milner and revealed in the course of the conference on April 25, from having the effect of frittering away that effort.

In a word, what ought to be done was for the Allied governments to study the question of American effectives as a whole and whatever decisions were taken, take them together.

This was done at Abbeville, on May 1 and 2, when the following arrangements were agreed to:

1. The British government undertook to furnish the tonnage necessary to transport from the United States to France 130,000 men in May, and 150,000 in June consisting solely of infantry and machine gun detachments.

2. The American tonnage would be used for the transport of artillery, engineers, services, etc.

3. A further examination of the situation would be made at the beginning of June and the program for the future decided upon.

American Army Arrives

It can be seen that these decisions were of the highest importance. They proved to be perfectly satisfactory, for, thanks to the magnificent co-operation of British shipping, on July 1st nearly 450,000 American infantry and machine-gunners were in France, come to fill up the gaps in the British and French armies.

On his side, Gen. Pershing proceeded with the transport of the other arms and services, using for this purpose American tonnage. He was thereby enabled to constitute in a short time autonomous American divisions in France. Special interests as well as those of the coalition were thus safeguarded.

Confined to her own resources, America had transported only 60,000 men in March of 1918 and 93,000 men in April, with British help these figures rose to 240,000 in May and 280,000 in June.

However, the rapid arrival of these large contingents caused other problems to present themselves. Time had been lacking to complete the training and organization of the troops in America, and it had to be continued and completed in France.

Now, while the problem of training was comparatively easy to handle, that of organization and the supply of all the implements of war needed by a modern army—such as equipment, arms, horses, material of every description—was much more complicated. All this had to be watched over closely if mistakes, omissions and loss of time were to be avoided.

To the battle-period, the opening of which had been marked by the German guns on March 21, there had succeeded a period of calm which we had not experienced for nearly two months. What was hidden behind this silence?

Enemy Present Mystery

We knew that the enemy had large numbers of troops available—from 76 to 80 divisions, according to the intelligence branch of general headquarters—that is, more than what he had available for his first attack between the Scarpe and the Oise. Where would they suddenly announce themselves? We searched the horizon, but the mystery remained unsolved.

Field Marshal Haig believed he was menaced with a new German offensive between Amiens and the sea, with its principal effort either on Albert or Ypres. Gen. Petain likewise inclined to this view. Indeed, he no longer feared an enemy attack in Champagne, and in the absence of confirmation from other sources, he put no faith in the tales of prisoners who, on May 19 and 22, declared that an important German offensive was in course of preparation between the Oise and Rheims.

Another task, and an urgent one, imposed itself, that of preparing to pass in our turn to the offensive.

"The offensive alone will enable us to bring the battle to a victorious close and, by seizing the initiative, assert our moral ascendency."

FRENCH 'SAPPERS' LAYING WIRES TO FRONT LINE TRENCHES

Linemen at work as they wore gas masks to prepare communication lines while French attacked on the Western Front.

But at a moment when we were obliged to severely husband our forces, this offensive must achieve results in proportion to the sacrifices entailed. Two fields of action fulfilled this condition:

(1) The ground between the Oise and the Somme. This offered the possibility of a combined attack by the French Third and First Armies and the right of the British Fourth Army, with the object of disengaging the Paris-Amiens railway line and the Amiens center of communications.

(2) The Lys region. Here a combined action of the left of the First British Army, the Second British Army and the Army Detachment of the North, would take as an objective the freeing of Ypres and the Bethune coal basin.

Germans Attack

Having adopted these two fields of action, a program for an offensive on the part of the Allied Armies was issued on May 20 to each commander-in-chief.

Preparations for the two offensives were to be made simultaneously and without delay. If the enemy did not attack, they would furnish the means of surprising him by a powerful blow. If he did attack, they would constitute, in the hands of the Supreme Command, a reply which might be invaluable.

Of the two projects, the most important, from the point of view of numbers alone, was undoubtedly the first, between the Oise and the Somme. An examination of it had been commenced the moment I took over my functions at Doullens. Gen. Petain and Gen. Fayolle had been associated in this study, to the end that the undertaking "might be prepared rapidly and powerfully."

As a matter of fact, it was necessary to reorganize the troops, who had barely emerged from an arduous battle, and to prepare "jumping-off" places from positions which were only as yet indifferently established.

It was also essential to carry out a regrouping of the Allied forces in Flanders, where the exigencies of rapid intervention had entailed a mixing-up of French and British divisions detrimental to the exercise of command.

Such was the situation when, suddenly, it was learned that a new offensive was on the point of being launched, and that this time it would be directed against the French front. On the afternoon of May 26, German prisoners declared that an attack on the Chemin des Dames would take place the following night after a short artillery preparation which would begin at 1 a. m. This information was correct.

At the hour named, the German artillery opened an extremely heavy bombardment, including an immense employment of gas-shells, along the front Rheims - Coucy - le - Chateau, and reaching to a depth from seven to eight miles. In certain places, more than 30 batteries to a thousand yards were counted.

At 3:40 a. m. the enemy's infantry advanced to the assault on a front of 33 miles between Brimont and Leuilly. Preceded by a dense creeping barrage and supported at various points by tanks, it penetrated by a single rush far into the French positions. The surprise had been practically complete and the results were not important.

Serious Error Made

Thirty German divisions (7th Army, Gen. von Boehm, and the right of the 1st Army, Gen. von Beulow) had been concentrated and transported to the point of application without being observed by the adversary, and now hurled themselves against the Chemin des Dames.

This mighty mass of attack found in front of it only seven Allied divisions in the first line, four French and three British, supported in rear by two French and one British divisions.

Unfortunately, the Commander of the 6th Army, at the very beginning of the attack, sent almost the whole of the 157th Division, which was back on the Aisne, to the support of the first position, thus leaving along a wide front, the important position of security offered by the Aisne, almost wholly unguarded.

By a fatal chance, the Germans made their main effort in this direction and they thus reached the river without striking a blow. Here, thanks solely to the rapidity of their advance, they were able to seize all the bridges between Vailly and Pontavert before even the demolition charges could be prepared.

From that moment on, our situation was serious. "At 11 a. m. no further illusion was possible." The three divisions in reserve that were still available were sent to army corps and employed against the two wings of the German attack, in an endeavor to at least dam it.

In the center, however, the enemy, moving freely in a breach 10 miles wide, pressed on to the Vesle, which he reached in the evening between Courlandon and Braine. The possession of Fismes alone was still disputed by the leading units of a French division (13th) which had been rushed up in motor trucks.

The error which we had already seen produced on the Somme the twenty-third of March, was here repeated.

Mr. Faulkner states that with the shipment of 2,170 Auburn and Cord cars by the company in the first 11 days of April, Auburn's total shipment since January 1 of this year has passed the entire total for 1930 by 195 cars. Auburn and Cord shipments from January 1 to April 11, this year, total 13,888, as against 13,693 for the full year of 1930.

During his visit to Pittsburgh, Mr. Faulkner visited many of the new dealers signed up by J. A. O'Malley, president of the Pittsburgh Auburn Company.

Steel Scrap Cut In Local Market

Following an extended period of dullness, scrap prices in this district have dropped 25 to 50c a ton. Heavy melting steel is down 50c on a sale at $12.50 and most other grades are off proportionately. Heavy melting, now quoted $12 to $12.50 a ton, is at the lowest level in approximately 10 years. Buying is almost negligible.

Why National Steel Is Envy of Industry

By B. C. FORBES

IMPRESSED BY the fact that one important concern, the National Steel Corporation, stood out from all other steel companies in the final quarter of last year by earning its common dividend, and that it is again the envy of competitors this year, I became interested in knowing just who was or who were responsible. Here is the homely, interesting story:

Mr. Forbes

It seems there was a Scotchman and a Welshman . . .

This, however, is not the commencement of the conventional joke, but rather of a most successful industrial achievement.

The Scotchman was Ernest T. Weir, now chairman of the board of National Steel Corporation; the Welshman, John C. Williams, one of its chief operating executives.

THE SCOTCH-WELSH coalition, inaugurated over a quarter century ago, has proved eminently successful. National Steel Corporation, now sixth largest unit in the industry, was the only one of the large steel companies to earn its common dividend in the final quarter of 1930.

And, today, the corporation is announcing that its earnings in the first quarter of 1931 also exceeded dividend requirements—an accomplishment emphasized by the probability that no other steel company of equal size earned its common dividend in the same period.

IN THESE days of depression, it is most cheering to uncover such tribute to a management.

Fate alone dictated the meeting of Weir and Williams many years ago in Pittsburgh. Williams had run away from his Welsh home when still a very small boy and went to work in the tin mills. He rapidly rose to superintendent status, emigrated to America and took the superintendency of a tin mill in Ishpeming, Mich. He was a very fine amateur boxer and considerable of a social leader, also an excellent handler of men.

Weir, unlike many of the present directing heads of the great steel companies, has been in the office end of the business since boyhood. He rapidly attained executive status in various companies in the Pittsburgh district.

A BUSINESS executive and a practical steelmaker — the perfect combination. The two men obtained a little backing from local men and took over a tin mill in Clarksburg, W. Va., which had been started by local talent. Weir handled the selling end of the business and the financing, while Williams operated the mill. Incidentally, Weir has been strong in condemnation of wage cuts. He believes in efficient operation and modern equipment, through which top wages can be distributed and yet relatively cheapest labor obtained because its productivity is higher.

WEIR, FORESEEING the steady absorption of the raw supplies needed in the industry, acquired the last large, free block of low-cost and high-grade ore in the country, from the Hanna interests.

Simultaneously with his purchase of the Hanna ore reserves, Weir, always ambitious to penetrate the Pittsburgh field, absorbed Great Lakes Steel Company. He also got blast furnaces from the Hanna interests.

Today, National Steel is a complete unit in the steel industry. Weir has balanced his company between making and finishing capacity so that now he does not have to shut down his blast furnaces and open hearths in lean times (which is very expensive). When business gets better, he can quickly finish up any ingots he has accumulated because he has an excess of finishing capacity.

WEAK RALLIES PUNCTUATE DECLINE

Market Offers Stronger Resistance Than It Did In Previous Session

NEW YORK, April 16.—The stock market vacillated uncertainly today, offering better resistance to the forces of depression than it did yesterday, but on the whole showing a complete lack of determination.

Share prices in the main worked lower but the decline was interrupted by spasmodic and rather feeble rallies. With the spring peak of industrial activity apparently reached and the next stimulation of changing seasons not due until August, the speculative fraternity is for the time being bereft of a sense of direction.

United States Steel slipped off about a point, going just a shade below the 1928 bottom of 132⅜.

Among other things, the market is waiting to see how far the shrinkage of dividends is likely to go. While few earnings statements for the first quarter are available as yet, enough fairly conclusive estimates are at hand to indicate that many of the leading industrials and railroads are not earning the current dividend rates. This applies to such corporations as United States Steel, Bethlehem and General Electric. If several prominent corporations see fit to continue current dividend rates by dipping into their surplus funds, Wall Street will interpret it as indicating confidence in a revival of corporate earning power by the end of the year, or at least the start of the next.

Several adverse dividend rumors have ben denied. Yesterday's declaration by Pennsylvania Railroad had been generally expected, although some apprehension was expressed in brokerage circles a few wekes ago. President Clarke, of Fox Film, said yesterday that the current rate would be maintained. There is a feeling that U. S. Steel will almost certainly maintain its current rate. Some inkling as to policy is expected at the annual stockholders' meeting Monday. Dividend action is not due until April 23.

Little of a decisive nature appeared in the day's corporate trade news. A sale of copper at 9¾ cents a pound, after the recent recovery from 9½ to 10 cents was not encouraging, but the market is so dull that little significance can be attached to it.

Credit conditions remained stationary.

OIL DECISION AIDS TRADE

CHICAGO, April 16.—The Supreme Court decision in favor of the defendant oil companies in the suit brought by the government charging violation of anti-trust laws in cross-licensing of gasoline cracking patents is a complete justification of the oil companies' stand and indicates cross-licensing of the patents was a sane and sensible business settlement of a situation too modern and complicated for the patent laws to settle, according to Edward G. Seubert, president of Standard Oil of Indiana. He said:

"There is no doubt that the decision will be of great value in establishing the right of modern business interests to make contracts needed to meet modern conditions when these contracts are in fact beneficial, not only to business interests, but also the public good."

Expression of Confidence Seen in Pennsylvania Dividend Action

The action of directors of Pennsylvania Railroad Company in declaring the usual quarterly dividend may be viewed unofficially as an expression of confidence in the future. It is not the policy of the management to make frequent dividend changes and revisions are made only after the most careful consideration. According to reliable information directors went into yesterday's meeting with an open mind. There had been no previous conference as to dividend policy, and the disbursement was not decided until time came for it to be acted upon.

That the short interest may provide a cushion for the market during reactions is the growing belief in conservative quarters. Policy of the bears has been to take in some of their short commitments during general selling and reactionary movements in the past few weeks. In many instances, stocks thus covered were put out again during the minor rallies. Without the covering many stocks would have suffered larger declines when the liquidation was in progress.

Advices from Detroit to one of the large New York wire houses state that good buying has appeared in Chrysler by interests in that city. This group is bullish on the stock for a long pull. The same interests were said to have been pessimistic a year or so ago. Reports have it that the company is now making a satisfactory profit per car on its present production basis, and that sales of its various models, particularly Dodge, have been showing definite improvement.

In answer to a question by a stockholder as to whether profits in the first quarter would show a 10 per cent decrease from last year, A. W. Milburn, president of Borden Company, said it would be a fair estimate, but pointed out that profits in the March quarter of 1930 established a record for the period.

People with bullish leanings are finding their mettle put to a trying test by the action of the market, and particularly the recognized leaders, at the moment. Most observers find it difficult to explain the gradual but persistent decline in the so-called pivotal issues. And some are beginning to look askance at the performance of the recognized leaders. More and more comment is being heard on the indicated lack of sufficient support to hold those selected stocks against the sporadic selling which develops from time to time. This brings up the question of whether bankers who frequently afford such support when needed, are lacking confidence in the immediate business outlook, and thus disinclined for the time being to provide anything beyond scant support buying on a scale down. Certainly the market reveals an absence of support which would seem in order if bigger interests were entirely satisfied with the picture.

After an unusually long meeting, directors of the Vanadium Corporation yesterday announced the quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share due at this time had been omitted. The stock which has been weak from the opening yesterday, ran into a flurry of heavy selling on the news notwithstanding the belief which had been expressed in some circles that such announcement when it came would probably result in a covering movement in the stock on the theory that the "bad news" was out. Vanadium had reported net equivalent to $3.05 a share last year, but a very considerable part of such income had been from non-recurring sources. Earlier this year the company had sold an issue of $5,000,000 convertible debentures to provide funds for reimbursement of its treasury for expenditures incurred in development of new plants and partly to secure working capital.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 16.—(AP.)—Influenced by unlooked for setbacks in Liverpool wheat quotations and lessened export demand for North American wheat, grains tended downward early today. Fresh low price records for securities counted also as a bearish factor. Opening ¼@⅜c off to ⅛c up, wheat afterward receded all around. Corn started at ⅛@⅜c decline and subsequently sagged further.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 16.—Slow selling kept the curb market soggy today. Small rallies appeared now and then as the trading grew duller, but real recuperative power was lacking and prices worked lower.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, April 16.—Cotton opened steady today, 1 to 4 points higher. May advanced to 10.19c and October 10.77c, with the market ruling about 4 to 6 points net higher at the end of the first half hour.

Demand tapered off after the early advance of 4 to 7 points, and the market became slightly easier under some further liquidation. There may have been some selling on the favorable weather map and reports of weakness in the stock market. May eased off from 10.20c to 10.12c and October to 10.72c. The midday market was within a point or two either way of yesterday's close.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Raw sugar was easy early today. Following sales of about 50,000 bags of Porto Rican late yesterday for April and May arrival to local refiners at 3.30c, or 2 points below the last previous sale, there were additional offerings at the same level. It was also reported that the Cuban National Export Corporation had sold 22,500 tons of raw sugars for May shipment at 6s 6¾d, c. i. f., equal to about $1.26 f. o. b. Cuba, and 7,500 tons for June shipment at 6s 8¼d c. i. f., equal to about $1.28 f. o. b. Cuba, to European destinations, or a total of about 210,000 bags.

Early Dealings Reflect Irregularity in New York; Blaw Knox Holds Firm

Moderate recessions in leading issues were noted at the opening of business on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Volume of trading was light and there was no indication in the early market that the selling was anything more than a natural reflection of the weakness on the "big board."

There was no presure in evidence either in the fuel or industrial group. Mesta Machine slipped back a large fraction while most of the fuels held close to the levels prevailing on the close last night. Hachmeister-Lind, in which trading is usually quiet, dropped a point on sales of a few shares. Blaw Knox appeared to have good support right under the market and its initial sale was at a fractional advance from the previous close.

FOX ELECTION POSTPONED

NEW YORK, April 16.—(AP.)—The annual meeting of stockholders of Fox Film Corporation after a short session today was adjourned until May 1.

Harley L. Clarke, president, explained this action was taken because of delay in preparation of the annual report by accountants who have been auditing the company's books for the purpose of recent financing.

He reported the gross income of the company had increased about 23 per cent last year.

Election of directors was deferred until the adjourned meeting.

Fox Film and Fox Theaters Corporation were ordered in a consent decree signed by Federal Judge Knox yesterday to divest themselves of stock in Loew's, Inc., operating a large chain of theaters. The decree terminates an anti-trust suit filed in 1928.

The court approved transfer of the stock to the Film Securities Corporation recently formed for that purpose.

The Fox companies must dispose not only of its stock in Loew's, of which it had working control, but also in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation, and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation.

Penna. Industries Net Profit $630,506

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

PENNSYLVANIA INDUSTRIES, INC., reported consolidated net income for 1930 of $630,506 after provision for federal taxes and other charges. After deducting preferred dividends the net earned for the common stock was $129,842 which was equivalent to 22 cents a share on 593,434 shares to be outstanding within a short time. The income included earnings of the Pennsylvania Bankshares and Securities Corporation from May 1, when all its common stock was acquired to December 31.

In 1929 Pennsylvania Industries earned $699,791 which was equivalent to 91 cents a share on 387,425 common shares outstanding at that time.

Securities owned which cost $19,418,949 had a market value on December 31, 1930, of $15,944,267. Since January 1 there has been some appreciation in the market value of these holdings. On February 28 they were worth $17,219,043.

New Holdings Acquired

THE PRINCIPAL CHANGES during the year in the corporation's holdings were the exchange of common stock of Spang, Chalfant & Co., for common and preferred stock of the National Supply Company, the acquisition of a large interest in Pittsburgh United Corporation and the acquisition of the entire issue of 206,009 shares of common stock of Pennsylvania Bankshares and Securities Corporation through an exchange of common stock on a share for share basis.

The list of securities shows that 39,216 shares of National Supply common and 11,198 shares of 7 per cent preferred were held. This materially increased Pennsylvania Industries' dividend income since Spang, Chalfant was not on a dividend basis. National Supply common paid $5 a share last year and is now on a $4 basis. The increase in dividend income from this source compensated for the almost complete elimination of profits from the sale of securities.

Holdings of Pittsburgh United Corporation common amounted to 147,100 shares. This company was formerly the Oil Well Supply Company. It sold its business and trade names to the United States Steel Corporation in exchange for Steel common stock.

To Increase Stock

AT THE TIME PENNSYLVANIA BANKSHARES was acquired Pennsylvania Industries did not have sufficient authorized common stock to complete the exchange after making provision for 229,241 shares of common stock reserved against subscription warrants. To provide the necessary 72,675 shares for the exchange in addition to the 520,759 shares outstanding, stockholders will be asked to approve an increase in the common stock from 750,000 shares to 1,000,000 shares at the annual meeting on May 6. On the balance sheet the 72,675 shares are treated as stock to be issued.

Holders of the preferred stock of Pennsylvania Bankshares were given new warrants entitling them to purchase common stock of Pennsylvania Industries in exchange for their original warrants for the purchase of Pennsylvania Bankshares common on an equivalent basis.

Assets Over $20,000,000

AGAINST TOTAL ASSETS of $20,327,113 Pennsylvania Industries had $6,925,000 of its own 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par value and $3,000,000 of Pennsylvania Bankshares 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $50 per value outstanding. The only indebtedness in addition to accrued taxes and minor items consisted of $1,585,000 in bank loans and $1,233,571 due on the purchase of securities.

Directors have declared three regular quarterly dividends of 62½ cents each on the Pennsylvania Bankshares preferred payable June 1, September 1 and December 1 to stock of record May 15, August 15 and November 15 and three regular quarterly dividends of $1.50 each on the Pennsylvania Industries preferred payable May 1, August 1 and November 1 to stock of record April 15, July 15 and October 15.

THE SECRET SIX -:- By Frances Marion

Reporters Watch Actions Of Rival Gangsters

CHAPTER VII.

A sensational melodramatic story of the underworld, adapted from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Cosmopolitan picture.

Peaches was to be listed among the "improvements" that had come with the metamorphosis of Johnny Franks' steak house, during its two years of prosperity.

For the restaurant, new, garish, with latticework booths, had as its hostess Johnny Franks' woman, costumed in as new and garish effects as the place itself.

Peaches resented the other "improvement" who presided at the combined cashier's and cigar counter—Anne Ralston, the pretty girl from the drug store.

Peaches saw in her an active rival. Franks looked at her a little too often. The big, handsome blonde kept an impassive face. But her plans were prophetic of evil.

When Franks and his men came through the restaurant, en route to Finkel's, Peaches, as usual, greeted Johnny warmly. He pushed by, abstractedly. Scorpio stopped. The big fellow had been annoying her lately. Ever since he'd joined the mob he had been trying, in his uncouth way to scrape closer acquaintance.

Scorpio Angered

"On your way, Slaughterhouse!" she snapped. Scorpio placed a detaining hand on her arm. "You're what I'd call plenty mamma!"

Her anger blazed.

"Quit pawing me! Get wise to what your place is around here!"

Scorpio's brow corrugated in a scowl of baffled rage.

"Get this, you blonde tramp!" between clenched teeth. "Some day you're going to eat dirt for this. Some day—" he paused and eyed her with anger not unmixed with desire. "Some day you're goin' to come crawling to me—on your hands and knees. Get me? On your hands and knees!"

Franks, waiting at the door, interrupted.

"Come on—we ain't got all night!" he shouted. Scorpio shifted his scowl to a grin and ambled after the boss.

A pulsating car waited at the curb. Without words, the men jumped in. The driver already had his instructions. The car quickly pulled away toward the river street and the drawbridge to the city.

Across the street, a taxi darted out of the shadows. Taking up the trail it followed the gangsters' car at a safe distance. In it rode Hank, the reporter.

Hank had not honored Centro with his presence for quite a time, but lately rumors around police headquarters in the city had claimed his attention.

"This Franks gang is getting pretty big—too big for the town of Centro," he had informed Meadows, his city editor. "They've already changed Centro from a nice home town to a sort of Barbaray Coast. If they ever start coming in here there'll be a mixup with Joe Colimo's gang that will shake the town."

The city editor nodded—and suggested that Hank keep an eye on Centro for a few days.

Neither city editor knew about the pretty girl at the Franks cigar counter.

Of the two reporters, Carl seemed to be the more confidential with Johnny Franks. Hank rather worried over that. He didn't like the looks of the growing gang, and hoped his friend wouldn't get in "too deep."

Hank Follows Trio

Hank was meditating on that very thing as the car roared in pursuit of the Franks machine. He started in surprise, as the route led to the drawbridge. This meant "moving in" and sooner than he'd expected. They rumbled over the bridge. Hank glanced sharply in the mirror above the driver.

Another taxi was following him.

"Shake the guy following us," he instructed the driver. The man, with a nod, suddenly turned the car into a narrow alley. Then he snapped out the car's lights.

The other taxi roared by.

In it, as Hank had suspected, was Carl.

Carl's car whirled around the next corner, picked up the trail of another taxi and went on. Hank's car emerged from the alley. Ahead they could still see the red tail light of the Franks machine.

"Stick on their tail," instructed the reporter.

"Joe Colimo," Franks instructed his men, as the car hurried toward Finkel's, "is dangerous as hell. He's a fine-looking guy, a swell dresser—and highbrow. Plays Wop opera on the piano. Dresses like a movie actor. Reads poetry. Writes it, too. But that don't mean he wouldn't have a guy bumped off as soon as look at him."

"He may be tough, but he's got one weak spot—his kid brother, Ivan," supplemented the Gouger. "He sent the kid to college, and won't let him mix up in the racket. Some day that soft spot will trip him up."

The car drew to the curb with a squeal of brakes.

They faced the doorway of a dingy resort, windows shuttered and dark to the street. Dirt hung thick on its walls. Here was "The Mousetrap," the speakeasy of "Mousetrap" Finkel.

Franks looked around quickly.

"Bunch up as we go in," he ordered. "Don't do nothing until I give you the eye. But—always be ready to reach with your rods."

DAILY TRUE STORY 'The Man Is Dead—'

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Relatives of Millionaire Hear Shocking News

I had been sent to investigate.

Old Maj. Appleson had money, a great deal of money. He also had land, great quantities of land, up in Swartzton.

Maj. Appleson also had heirs, three of them, two nephews and a niece, all married and all comfortably well off, although none of them was a millionaire or anything like it.

Maj. Appleson didn't care two hoots in an empty rain barrel for his heirs. Chauncy Appleson, his late brother's son; Bertram Haynes and Mrs. Loring, his late sister's children, were the heirs.

These heirs cavorted around in plus fours and swatted gutta percha pills with sticks. They also frittered away God's valuable time sitting at little tables playing with the devil's toys, cards, at a game called bridge. Worse, they imbibed long drinks of aerated water or ginger ale with fruit juices, ice and—here's the horrible part—rum!

All sorts of spiritous liquors came under the single hideous heading of "rum" to the major. I know all of this because I had been to see him the year previous on almost the same errand.

My business being real estate, the valuation of real estate anywhere at any time, I had been called into the affair by the Fairlands Corporation.

It seems that a number of very wealthy people wished to establish a most exclusive country club out at Swartz Lake. It was to be for millionaires only. There were to be racing stables and a track. Lake front residential colony for summer, polo fields, two 18-hole golf courses and what not.

Intends to Sell

Old Maj. Appleson owned about 1,200 acres right in the heart of where the Fairlands crowd wanted to set up this Ritzy country club.

Now Maj. Appleson wasn't really old and crippled. He might have been 50, but no more, and he was ruddy of face and spry as a cricket the year before when I saw him.

At that time he thought he might possibly sell this property. It was on the outer edge of his vast holdings and half a mile from his beautiful old estate.

There was a catch—just one catch: "This property of the major's was in a V shape, or rather, there was a huge notch of land in V shape, running into it. There was probably 190 acres of this land. It was owned by Chauncy Appleson, Bertram Haynes and Mrs. Loring, the heirs to the major's vast acres and multiple millions.

This much of the land had come down to these heirs.

These heirs had been responsible for interesting the millionaires in the Fairlands Country Club project.

Now if they could get "Uncle Phineas" to sell his land at a reasonable figure, they could sell their own and get more than double a reasonable figure. Otherwise it might be 50 or 100 years before they had a chance to sell this land, and they wanted the money now, realizing that it wouldn't be worth much to them 100 years from then.

And so I had been sent out again to investigate.

I was urged to do my best.

"You will do your best, won't you?" Mrs. Loring begged.

"We'll make it worth your while," Chauncy said, grandly, "plenty worth your while."

Recognized by Chauncey

"In promises or in a written agreement?" I asked, softly.

"If you put the deal through you get your 5 per cent," he said.

"I value real estate, I do not sell it, but I will see what I can do. I have an aunt out there who knows the major and perhaps she will help me get a line on him," I explained.

And so I went out there and I also saw my buxom Aunt Janice, whose sparkling black eyes and naturally rosy cheeks give the lie to her 40 years.

The heirs were all down at Blue Inlet, where Chauncy had a large summer place.

When I drove up and reached the wide veranda that faced the ocean, two neighbors were over, making enough for two tables of bridge.

"Ah!" Chauncy said when he recognized me.

"You look happy. I'm sure you succeeded," Mrs. Loring shrilled at me.

"Well, well, don't hesitate, tell us!" Bertram Haynes ordered.

"Well," I said, still smiling, "I investigated and—"

I was trying to think of how to put it, how to express myself with a proper degree of solemnity.

"Of course you investigated—that's what we sent you up there for. Didn't you get to see the old fool?" Chauncy demanded.

Offered Drink

"What's that?" I said sharply.

"Didn't you even see Maj. Appleson" bellowed Bertram.

"A-hem," I cleared my throat, "I investigated. The man is dead—"

"Whooooops!"

It was Mrs. Loring.

"For Pete's sake, let me call our lawyer," Bertram said, half a dozen times as Mrs. Loring chattered about plans.

Chauncy came out with a tray and plenty of alluring cocktails on it.

He playfully ran a stick down over some Japanese dinner gongs.

"Drinks!" he shouted.

He saw me standing there.

"Ha—a libation for the messenger of glad tidings—"

"Chauncy! Please, don't word it that way," his wife hissed, "it sounds rather—er—raw, just as the poor fellow has died."

"Aw, be honest—we never liked the old fool, he never liked us—he thought we were hell-bent—so why not be honest and admit that we can use his millions—there'll be a million each, at least—remember, he leaves no chick or child—only the three of us."

With this speech the others nodded and Chauncy Appleson turned again to hand the cocktail to me.

"In the olden days messengers of bad news were killed and bringers of good news were rewarded—here is your reward."

Objects to Club

He forced the glass in my hands.

"Why, really, I don't know, under the circumstances—"

"Be sensible—you understand the situation. You won't lose; we shall appoint you to handle the land deal for us, all of it, and—er—if you boost the values a little those other millionaire duffers can stand it and you get an extra 5 per cent. How does that sound?"

"If you'll permit me—"

"By George now, I must telephone the office and have Johnson see if Whitcomb still wants to buy my share of the business," Chauncy shouted, starting for the telephone.

"Just a moment, Mr. Appleson," I managed to say, "permit me to get in a word. Er—in what manner in the olden days did the kings or whatever put the bearers of bad news to death?"

Chauncy laughed.

"You should worry," he said.

"Oh, by the way," Mrs. Loring said, with true feminine curiosity, "what caused poor Uncle Phineas' death?"

"I've been trying to tell you. Maj. Appleson didn't die," I managed to say.

Chauncy and Bertram wheeled and glared at me.

"You said he was dead!" thundered Chauncy.

"I did, and Mrs. Loring emitted a whoop that put an end to further speech," I reminded them. "What I started out to say was that the man was dead set against having a country club there—and more than that, his wife is dead set against it."

"His wife?"

Six throats emitted the same words at once.

"Yes, he married my dear Aunt Janice this morning. I'm to give up my outside work to devote my time to managing his holdings. I agree with him, we don't want the millionaire snobs cavorting about the estate—so sorry!"

The only sounds were my feet going down the walk to my car and the moaning of the ebbing tide at the shore.

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—

HOW TO HOLD A HUSBAND

Ed. Note—Congressman Frisby, during the intermission, has kindly consented to dash off a few hints to women on how to hold a husband. You, too, are welcome to send in suggestions. Simply address your communication to the station to which you are listening.

By Horace Frisby.

Whoopsie-daisie! I have been held by so many women I hardly know where to begin or where to stop. You know I am often mistaken for Lou Tellegen—in fact I was mistaken just the other day. Where was I at? Oh, yes—I want to explain what is called the handy letter file, pictured above. Any wife can make one of these artistic thinglings, and hang it in her husband's office. This is a sly hint for the stenographer to resign. The third Mrs. Frisby, who was one of the best stenographers I ever had, worked this plan very successfully. Tomorrow I shall tell how to make neckties out of crepe paper.

Dr. Steedle's Error

Legislator Steps Off Safe Ground in Saying Kline Regime Satisfies People.

A new spokesman for the people is Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, Kline machine floor leader in the House of Representatives, Harrisburg. Feeling, perhaps, that, like Representative James Wettach, on a recent occasion, he might be called upon for an explanation in relation to the killing of the Moore city manager bill, in which he had a big part, Dr. Steedle already has done some "explaining" in Harrisburg.

He is said to have criticized newspapers, Chamber of Commerce, Civic Club of Allegheny County and other supporters of the Moore bill. He is quoted as stating the civic groups are "disgruntled." He branded newspapermen as "lobbyists." He said the people of Pittsburgh were satisfied with the present form of government.

In the latter statement, Dr. Steedle is revealed as having been a little too rash for the safety of his own position. He should have stuck to criticism.

But he stepped off safe ground when he said the people of Pittsburgh are satisfied. If so, wherein is the danger to Dr. Steedle's political master even though a bill permitting the people to vote on whether they wanted a city manager be passed? Why not pass it and clip the wings of the "disgruntled" by providing a way whereby the policy of the Kline administration—or any other—could be given a vote of confidence in a referendum?

If the people are satisfied, there would be nothing to fear. Perhaps they are not so satisfied as Dr. Steedle assures us they are. Anyway, why not let them say so, themselves?

Think and Talk Canal

Further Expansion of Inland Waterways Needed by Pittsburgh.

The importance of water transportation to the growth of the Pittsburgh district has again been demonstrated by the increased use of the rivers by the leading oil companies. This low cost method of moving freight is making Pittsburgh one of the greatest centers for the distribution of petroleum products in the country.

Gulf Oil is distributing gasolene and other products by water from its new refinery here. Standard Oil of Pennsylvania is bringing gasolene into this district by barge. Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc., a newcomer to this territory, plans eventually to bring its supplies from the mouth of the Mississippi River to Pittsburgh by water.

In the near future the completion of the Intracoastal Canal in Texas will extend this city's inland water transportation facilities as far as the Houston-Galveston basin.

Further expansion of this valuable aid to Pittsburgh prosperity is needed and the agitation for the construction of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Waterway should be continued until definite results are obtained.

The Chamber of Commerce was given hearty co-operation in its recent efforts in this direction. But the enthusiasm about the project must not be allowed to cool. Continuous effort is needed to overcome the tendency of government officials to let things slide.

Pittsburgh businessmen must keep on thinking and talking canal until they get what they want.

Let Probe Be Thorough

Director Lang Takes Proper Attitude Regarding Public Servants Who Are Evasive.

The public will support heartily the attitude of Director Lang in relation to inspectors of the Department of Public Works testifying at the probe of the department by Council. He says he will suspend any inspector refusing to testify on the grounds of possible incrimination, and will dismiss them if the cause is revealed later to be sufficient.

Mr. Lang says he desires that "free, full and dispassionate consideration be given to the questions involved."

That is what the public desires, too, and it is apt to look with suspicion on a witness who is represented in the hearing by an attorney, and refusing to testify on his advice, as was the situation Monday, when an inspector was called.

The public wants the truth and nothing else just now. It is not edified by seeing witnesses who are called represented by and advised by attorneys.

Director Lang has taken a proper stand.

Moore Will and Royalty

News of Queen's Flight and Local Litigation Show Life Indeed Is Strange.

In adjoining columns of one edition of the Sun-Telegraph yesterday were a story of international importance and one of local interest, yet of intimate relationship, one of those strange happenings that accentuate the uncertainty of life. One was the account of the flight of Queen Victoria from Spain. The other concerned the progress of a suit contesting the will of the late Alexander P. Moore, former ambassador to Spain, which named Queen Victoria as one of the beneficiaries of the Moore estate.

The late ambassador is known to have been a great admirer of both King Alfonso and Queen Victoria. Once, while he was home from Spain on a visit, he attended a luncheon in his honor given by Pittsburgh nawspapermen. He spoke highly of the human qualities of the royal pair, especially of the King, and predicted that if Spain ever turned republic, Alfonso would run for president—and be elected.

Now Mr. Moore is dead, his royal friends are without a home, and the money he would have given to one of them is subject to litigation. Man proposes, but a Higher Power disposes!

Whose motto is: "I never quit."

ZEPPELIN, BIOLOGICAL SPORT

By Archibald Henderson

Fortunate indeed is that man who invents something of large and permanent value to mankind. For his name is sure to go down to posterity as a benefactor of the human race. History records with gratitude the deeds of those who contribute to the progress of civilization, who further the progress of the people in the upward climb toward higher attainments. Such a man is Ferdinand von Zeppelin, whose name is forever linked with that of the dirigible balloon.

Ferdinand von Zeppelin was born on July 8, 1838, in his grandparents' home on the "Island" in the Lake of Constance. Little or nothing in his heredity is at all relative of his genius as an inventor. His ancestors appear in the records of the village of Zepelin in Mecklenburg, North Germany, as early as 1286. Although the spelling of the town is unchanged to this day, his family for many centuries have spelled their name with two p's. Both the father and grandfather of Ferdinand von Zeppelin played important roles in the political and diplomatic life of Wurttenberg, but neither showed the faintest trace of scientific or inventive genius. Nor do we find any scientific progenitor in the maternal line, the Macaires, who were French emigres living in Consance. Ferdinand was a "sport" in the biological sense, the talents of his ancestors finding in him brilliant expansion in the field of invention.

A life of distinction in the army seemed his predestined career. After receiving an excellent preparatory training, he entered the War Academy at Ludwigsburg, whence he was graduated in 1857. Instead of reveling in the gay life of a crack regiment, to which he belonged, he asked permission to be transferred to the University of Tubingen for the purpose of studying engineering. The year he spent here confirmed in him tastes for engineering and mechanical design and foreshadowed his future career.

It is a matter of interest that he visited the United States during the Civil War and was attached to the Union Armies as a military observer. Even at this time, he displayed great interest in ballooning and made one historic ascent in a captive balloon at Fort Snelling. After his return to Germany he saw service in the army for years, winning medals and distinction for his bravery and daring exploits. As Margaret Goldsmith says in the interesting biography of the famous inventor: During the siege of Paris, Zeppelin was attached to the German general staff headquarters stationed at Villiers, very near Paris.

This assignment at headquarters was of tremendous importance to his whole future career, because, at Villiers, he was in a position to observe closely the use the French made of balloons during the siege. Zeppelin carried his field glasses, attached round his shoulders by a strap, day and night. He watched practically every balloon which left the besieged city bringing messages to the outside world. The balloons were not sent up unless the wind was favorable, but even so, if the wind changed suddenly, they were often driven into the German lines or far afield in the wrong direction. The element of luck in the failure or success of a balloon flight irritated him profoundly. His scientific mind revolted against such an irrational procedure.

Accordingly he resolved to devote the remainder of his life, which he did, to making a military dirigible balloon.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The old church stands above the rocks. It has stood there since Columbia was a mining camp in the roaring 50s. That small, battered building with its leaning tombstones, its ragged cypresses, has seen history boil beneath it. But, coming up the highway in the thin, sharp spring sunlight, you do not remember that. You do not even notice the church at first. You only see the rocks.

Those miles of monstrous, naked rock—

Now there is a bareness natural to rocks. But there is something abnormal — abominable — about these stripped stones. The place is not right. It is, somehow, dead. And, before it died, something furious and shameful, that turned decent rock and soil into this twisted hell.

Something did happen. The fury of man gone mad for gold happened. Once earth lay thick—ten, thirty, one hundred feet upon these ledges. Pines towered, smoky dark, against the dreaming sky. Quail called and scuttled through the chapparal. Larks nested in the flower-tangled grass. Deer slipped—a file of dappled shadow—to the pool. The air was like a deeper, warmer pool.

Then someone found the color in a creek and, overnight, the rush was on. Down from the Mother Lode towns to the north, up from the San Joaquin Valley ranches to the west, over the Sierra Nevada ranges to the east, they came ... in curious trickles ... in hurrying groups ... in racing waves of men. And fell upon the land—

Today those men are dead. Some doubtless died in decent, quiet beds. But others had no chance to choose their spots. They took their death just as it came ... beside the pan that held disputed gold ... across the deck that held an extra ace ... before some bar or brothel, wet lip stiffening while it grinned, hot eye glazing while it glanced.

So, one by one, they went. Now they're all gone. No bullets whistle down the empty street. No picks and shovels clang beside the creek. The hands that shot and shoveled are no more. But still their record stands, in tortured stone.

This gaunt, gouged granite—these contorted crags—those ledges crumbling over secret, stagnant pools—hold all the story of their greed and hate, their frantic struggle and their furious lust. The rocks they shamed shame them—now they are dead.

And yet above those rocks, their church still stands. They built that church, between their brawls and blasts . . . to satisfy some vague and haunting dream. Their gold is scattered and their flesh is dead . . . BUT THE DREAM LIVES ON.

They lived like beasts in pits they dug with their own hands—

And always men dig pits with their own hands!

But always, too, they make a place to dream—

Of peace and truth, and kinder, cleaner ways—

And always, though flesh dies, THE DREAM LIVES ON.

Plowboy

How good to be a plowboy
And tramp the bright day long
Across the sloping fertile fields
In time to robin's song.

The furrows lie so closely
So strong the dark earth's scent,
He hears wise Nature's beating heart
And guides his plow, content.

Not his the futile groping
For goals too far, too high;
His heart is lighter than the wind,
Unvexed as summer sky.

Not his the high endeavor,
The swift, world-thrilling deeds;
He makes his furrows straight and true
And sows the fruitful seeds.

How good to be a plowboy,
So far from worldly strife,
Untouched by all life's fitful rage
And yet so close to life!

As You Have Suspected

When prudence comes in at the door, love has already flown out of the window; no man's common sense ever comes into action, until his heart is having a reaction.

There are 40 ways of making a man happy. The first consists in knowing when to pet and coddle him; the other 39 consist in knowing when to let him alone.

It is the feat of a woman's life, these days, to find just that happy medium between the sort of a man who insists on salting all his money and sentiment down and the kind who insists on burning them all up.

When a man starts skidding down hill, he always blames it either on some woman above him who "threw him down," or on some woman below, who "tempted" him down.

The average man is capable of only one love in a lifetime; but, alas, he has to do so much experimenting in order to find out WHICH one.

Man may have seven ages, but when a woman has reached an age that she likes, she is logical enough to stick to it.

The average man is perfectly willing to grant woman all the great virtues, if she will only let him alone and permit him to enjoy the pleasant little vices in peace.

To a woman, love is the high-road to happiness; to a man, it is just one of the little wayside taverns along the road, where he stops to refresh his soul (or his vanity) on the journey toward success.

This world is a good, kind old world, after all! It will forgive you for a thousand things for which you will never be able to forgive yourself!

Hero or Criminal?

Which Will Your Child Be?

BRYAN UNTIEDT, HERO OF THE PLEASANT HILL, COLORADO, BUS TRAGEDY

MYRON HESS, NEW YORK BOY, HELD ON A CHARGE OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER

The boy at the right is charged with murder.

One has been summoned to the White House as guest of the President of the United States.

The other has been summoned by the law to answer for a self-confessed crime.

One lives in a humble farm home in far away Colorado. His life has been busy, useful, not easy.

The other lives in New York City. His life has been less busy, less useful, and vastly easier.

You might have said, not knowing either boy, that fate had handicapped young Bryan Untiedt and favored young Myron Hess.

Bryan had few of the advantages of "civilization" on his lonely farm, many of the hardships of pioneer life. Myron had all the advantages that a great city affords—good schools, a comfortable home, and no hardships.

One's path was rough, the other's smooth. And now one has inspired a whole nation by a brave and unselfish act, while the other has broken his mother's heart by a moment of criminal folly.

Pictures such as these interest every father and mother.

They seem to ask, "Which road will your child take?"

Time alone can answer that question.

Parents, however, can HELP to answer it by the kind of home they make, and the example of their own lives.

Where these are wrong, it is hard for a child to go right.

Where these are right, it is infinitely harder for a child to go wrong.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 16.—The biggest insurance district in New York is on Williams street, between Wall and Fulton, far downtown. More than 10,000 persons who make a living out of insurance—fire, marine and accident—are housed in office buildings in the area.

The life insurance centers are scattered, congealing at such points as the Metropolitan Tower at Madison and Twenty-third and the New York Life Building at Madison and Twenty-seventh and so on. The Metropolitan, for instance feeds about 9,000 employes daily at the Madison avenue address.

Over in Newark the Prudential feeds about 7,500 daily. Throughout the United States are some 2,000,000 workers concerned with the general insurance business. There are 150,000 insurance agents in America and 15,000 brokers of insurance in New York.

One company employs 43,000 workers in the United States and Canada. Insurance offers more stern competition for the newcomer than perhaps any other calling. It seems hopelessly overcrowded yet each year newcomers signalize their efforts with startling success.

It is axiomatic that when a man fails at everything else he goes into the insurance business. This is not strictly true yet there are many indeed who through sheer desperation have turned to insurance and won a success they never dreamed.

The calling is far from prosaic. It tingles with thrills. Men with no capital but plenty of elbow grease have in a few short years not only made fortunes but built up a life income for themselves and heirs. It is not an endeavor for the faint hearted.

Almost every insurance policy is sold through sheer persistence. A vague rumor in the lounge of a New York club sent one agent on a hurried trip to London. There he learned his prospect had set off for Africa. Three months later he cornered him in a Capetown hotel and sold him a $3,000,000 policy.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Are you worrying yourself into a poor physical condition?

Does every little ache and pain presage to you early decay?

Have you formed the habit of complaining of imagined afflictions as well as those which you really experience?

You like attention, want to be waited upon, long to be saved from doing many little duties.

You rather like being classed as a semi-invalid for this brings you attention and sympathy and service from other members of your family.

Much of the work that others do for you you might have performed for yourself.

You have avoided so much that you should have done that you have convinced yourself that you are incapable of doing your duty.

Members of your family have noticed that when things come up in which you are particularly interested you make a special effort to do what you would not have undertaken otherwise.

A complaining person can wreck the happiness of a family circle.

Braddock Opens Drive to Eliminate Fire Hazards

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

'FORWARD EAST LIBERTY' DRIVE NEARS END

MYSTERIOUS BLAZES FOUGHT

Borough Orders Frequent Inspections to Avert Rise in Insurance Rates

Continual inspection to uncover fire hazards today was under way in Braddock as the result of insurance companies threatening to withdraw from the borough due to the increasing number of blazes, many of mysterious circumstances.

Fire Chief Thomas K. Martin used firemen to check business buildings and dwellings, following the airing of insurance companies' threats at a Council meeting Monday. This action, it is believed, will stay the threatened increase in insurance rates made by several companies after other firms announced they were considering withdrawing from the borough.

Councilman V. C. Kolski lead the action resulting in the new system. Heretofore inspections were made about every three years, it was said. Kolski quoted County Fire Marshal Thomas Pfarr as saying:

"There are about 20 insurance companies ready to withdraw from Braddock because of the number of mysterious fires here."

The councilman said the statement was made after a recent outbreak of fires, many found burning under mysterious circumstances. Chief Martin said firemen recently found five fires burning in one house.

FIGHT POLL TAX IN BRADDOCK

Opposing passage of the measure before the Legislature substituting a poll tax for personal assessment in boroughs, the Braddock borough council today was withholding definite plans for its fight while waiting views of legislators of the Tenth District.

Telegrams expressing opposition and asking for their attitude on the measure proposed by Senator James J. Coyne were sent to all legislators.

VEROSKY LEADS ATTACK

President of Council Michael J. Verosky and Councilman V. C. Kolski led the attack on the bill at the last council meeting. Kolski declared the bill eliminated the right of boroughs to assess personal taxes and substituted a poll tax of 50 cents on each voter.

Declaring that the tax burden of Braddock would be thrown on property owners, Verosky pointed out that the council and school board each would be compelled to increase taxes on real property as much as two mills. It was estimated the borough would lose $25,000 to $35,000 in revenues.

The present taxes of 13 mills will be continued through 1931, council decided.
